126 DEAD BODIES HAVE BEEN RECOVERED FROM THE ILL-FATED ROLLING MILL MINE

Three Died After Removal to the Hospital, Others Are Thought to Remain in the Pit, and 18 Have Been Taken Out Alive.

THE RESCUE WORK IS UNDER TERRIBLE DIFFICULTIES

By ALFRED R. CRUM,
Staff Correspondent.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., July 12.—At 3:20 this morning the rescuing party brought 19 dead out of Westmont opening. This makes a total of 126 dead recovered, including three men who died in the hospital.

Two men died in the hospital after midnight. Other bodies will be sought for after daylight.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., July 11.—From official sources about the mine the estimate of from 125 to 130 dead is confirmed. Up to midnight 104 bodies have been recovered. One dead at the hospital makes 105. There may be 20 to 30 yet in the mines. The rescue party is still working.

Eighteen victims of the Rolling Mill mine disaster were taken to the Cambria hospital during the day. One died at 10 o'clock tonight. He was Jacob Siviesz, one of the last six taken from the mine alive. Two more probably will die. Their names have not yet been learned. The remaining three of the last lot recovered will live. They have not been identified.

Johnstown, Pa., July 11.—This was a day of horrors for Johnstown. All day long the undertakers' wagons and hospital ambulances have been all too familiar sights on her streets. Deep down in the earth scores of rescuers have been busy in too often vain searches for the living and in the collection of the bodies of the dead, with which the ill-fated Klondike workings of the Cambria Steel Company's Rolling Mill mine were thickly dotted.

All day long the walls of the bereaved have resounded throughout the city, strong men have broken down and wept like the widows and mothers and little children that have mingled with them in the crowds around the morgue and the entrance to the ill-fated mine. It is a city of anguish so keen that the most blunted sensibilities felt the awful sorrow that hangs over this twice-stricken Johnstown.

The tale of the one day's work of the rescue parties is almost enough to tell the story. Less than a score of burned and unconscious victims, brought out of the charnel house underground alive, with five times as many mangled and swollen dead bodies yielded up by a reluctant mother earth. And the end is not yet.

Bright Side of Human Nature.

It has been a day of events—but sad events. The little corps of heroic rescuers, braving death in horrible form, absolutely beyond human aid if the dreaded second explosion should come; the volunteers who have been tenderly caring for the burned and mangled corpses, standing fast to their nauseating task with fidelity of soldiers, stand out in bright relief against the heavy cloud of gloom.

The men of this city are strong in the face of calamity. Ten times the number that could possibly be employed have volunteered for dangerous work under the ground, and what, perhaps, requires more moral courage, the facing of the sickening sights at the morgue.

Many of the victims who were caught in the explosion itself are frightfully mangled, some being almost blown to pieces. Of the paltry 18 living survivors who reached the hospital alive, one already has died and two more will possibly succumb to their injuries before the sun sets today.

How Some Saved Themselves.

Of the 14 injured rescued today, many were machine operators and saved themselves by using the compressed air that was supplied their machines. Another party broke open an air main and lived until aid came, by clinging close to it while the deadly after-damp closed tightly around them.

These last 14 were almost dead when rescued, and hope was gone out for those who so long fought for life in the poisonous atmosphere of the Klondike section.

There are still two entire headings and parts of two more to be explored. The rooms last opened had but few inmates, and it is feared the remaining 37 rooms will unfold a still greater tale of horror. In those levels the employes say that the men averaged three to a room. The officials, on the contrary, are confident that the rooms yet to be visited will be as bare of occupants as the last opened, which yielded such a small proportion of victims.

The work of the rescuers has been going on steadily since yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when the party of four, headed by Pit Boss Harry Rodgers and Fire Boss Retallac., were overcome and rescued with difficulty in an unconscious condition. The party that followed them at 4 o'clock was composed of Mine Superintendent George Robinson, Drs. Hannan, Taylor and Woodruff, with eight miners. They, too, were overcome by gas when they attempted to enter an abandoned working to reach the men who had preceded them, and they made their way back with difficulty.

Robinson Saved His Own Brother.

Armed with oxygen tanks, and reinforced by others, they again attempted their heroic task and returned with the four men of the first rescuing party. Back they went again, and some of those men worked steadily from that time until late tonight. Supt. Robinson helped out his own brother in a critical condition, and he was sent to the hospital, but never for a moment did the superintendent lag in his work, and he had to be dragged out of the mine by main force today. His brother will recover.

Late last night the morgue established at the armory of Company H was notified that over two score dead miners would be brought through to the Westmont entrance in mine cars. Attendants were immediately selected from scores of volunteers. Forty-seven dead were brought through weeping crowds to the morgue at 7 o'clock this morning.

About 5 o'clock this evening 38 other bodies were brought in and one man died at the hospital later in the evening. Late tonight the morgue was notified that 17 others would be sent over before daybreak, bringing the total found in 24 hours up to 104.

Unconfirmed Rumors.

Tonight the city is a prey to the wildest rumors, and anxiety is so great that few eyes are closed in sleep. Reports of 50 and 60 new dead, follow one another with great rapidity, but they cannot be confirmed at the mine. It is known that the end of the search is not far away, perhaps but a few hours, and certainly but a day or two.

It is also a practical certainty that none of those still entombed can get out alive except by almost a miracle. Friends and relatives of the missing—and they seem to be many—are waiting in a hushed dread for the confirmation of their fears, or a joy so great that it can scarcely be realized.

The cause of the disaster is still wrapped in mysteary. Marshal Moore, chief engineer of the mine, says it is due to the carelessness of some employe, and the statementof Mine Inspector Josiah T. Evans seems to confirm this view. On the other hand, there are the inevitable whispers that follow after a great calamity, that the company is to blame jointly with the mine inspector.

DISOBEDIENCE OF RULES CAUSE OF THE HORROR

So Says Moore, Mining Engineer of Cambria Steel Company.

FINANCIAL LOSS NOT OVER $50,000

By GEORGE A. CAMPSEY,
Staff Correspondent.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., July 11.—"There are no men alive in the mine. The cause of the disaster was simply the extreme carelessness or the disobedience of rules the company has laid down."

This was the statement made shortly before midnight tonight by Marshal Moore, mining engineer of the Cambria Steel Company, who has the whole charge of the rescuing parties that have been at work in the mine.

Mr. Moore has been in and about the mine for the past 36 hours and is on the verge of collapse. General Manager Price of the steel company almost forced him to come out of the mine. He arrived at the office at 10:30 and had a conversation with Mr. Price in the private office in the mine yards. Mr. Moore continued:

"Just when we left the mine at 10 o'clock tonight we found 17 additional bodies. They are in No. 6 right. There probably are, all told, not more than 30 men yet lying dead in the mine, but this statement is entirely unofficial.

"We have yet four headings which we can't reach on account of firedamp and gas. The headings are: Lower part of No. 4 left, lower part of No. 5 left, upper end of No. 7 right, and the right parallel to the main entrance. I do not expect to find over 10 additional men in all these headings, but, of course, you can never tell. Just where we expected to find the most today we found the least, and vice versa.

"I must again say the catastrophe was caused by some of the miners. A miner working in a mine for many years naturally grows careless. This mine was considered, and really was, one of the safest in the United States. The Cambria Company is in no manner at fault.

"We have been working in the mine today, principally to get out the dead and what few alive we found. We have been pumping air into the mine all day, and the results of the searching parties' efforts today and tonight are even greater than my most sanguine expectations. Besides Mine Inspector Robert Evans, we have had in the mine this afternoon

DIFFICULT WORK OF RESCUE CONTINUES ALL DAY AND VERY LATE INTO THE NIGHT

Trains of Coal Cars at Intervals Come Out of the Mine Loaded, Some With the Living and Some With the Dead—Others Were Horribly Mangled.

ONE PARTY WAS SAVED BY TAPPING AN AIR PIPE

By GEORGE A. CAMPSEY,
Staff Correspondent.

Johnstown, Pa., July 11.—The task of attempting to rescue the entombed miners began last night, but owing to the great amount of firedamp still in the mine the work was retarded to a great extent. Many times up to 4 o'clock this morning the rescuing parties were driven back.

At 2 o'clock all the second party that went into the mine gave up and came out. Shortly after 3 o'clock another party was organized and went in. The air pumps had been working to their utmost capacity, so there was pure air and a better chance to get at the entombed men.

At 6 o'clock this morning the third party to go into the mine gave a good account of their time by sending out to the Westmont opening the dead bodies of 47 men. Twenty-five of these were found on a sidetrack about two miles from the drift mouth, which showed that the men had made a final attempt to get to a place of safety when the rumble of the first explosion was felt.

When found most of them were lying on their faces. They were in fair condition, considering the terrific force of the explosion, but their death must have been in extreme agony.

Struggles for Life.

Twenty-two others were picked up in rooms Nos. 4, 5 and 6, on the right, and every evidence goes to show that those made a hard fight for life. Many of them were found with their arms around their bosom friends. Fathers and sons died in each other's arms. One unfortunate had his head and one arm blown off.

The greatest work accomplished in the line of rescue, was done by the party that went into the mine early this morning after the dead bodies of the 47 miners had been removed. This party consisted of about 75 men under the leadership of George T. Robinson, superintendent of the Franklin mine, and Marshall Moore, mining engineer of the Cambria Steel Company. State Mine Inspector Evans also worked in the mine until 3 o'clock this afternoon, when he came out to get reinforcements, who went in tonight to relieve the day rescuing party.

Shortly after 9 o'clock this morning the rescuing party divided into sections to better explore the various sections of the mine. The first party started down to left Nos. 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8, which received the brunt of the fire explosion. Not returning to the appointed meeting place of the other sections of the party, two hours later, fears were expressed for their safety and a second party was sent to search for the men who first went in.

The Rescuers Rescued.

They were found shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon, and although every member of the party was on his feet, many of them passed through awful experiences. These men bravely continued their work of searching for the victims and refused to go to the surface when urged by other members of the party.

The work had borne fruit, though it was not until the afternoon that any more living men were brought out at the Westmont opening. Fifteen men were rescued alive up to 6 o'clock this evening. Fourteen were brought out of the Westmont entrance, and one man from the Mill creek opening of the mine. This made 19 rescued alive up to that time. Of the miners rescued alive, 13 probably will live. The other six are likely to die.

Some of the rescued were able to walk and were in better condition than the members of the rescuing party had the slightest idea of finding them.

Shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon a great crowd began to gather around the Westmont entrance to the mine. The word went out that the first trip of the afternoon had started from the innermost part of the mine at 2:30 o'clock. The great crowd was not disappointed, for promptly at 3 o'clock a string of coal flats drawn by cable was pulled down to the offices and the first detachment of live men found today reached the surface.

Showed Surprising Endurance.

There were eight men in the party and every man had his lamp lighted and was looking fairly well, considering that he had been penned in the ill-fated mine for 27 hours.

The eight men were in the last car, and when the crowd caught its first glimpse of them they wished to cheer. One or two persons threw their hats in the air and yelled as they saw their brothers and fathers coming out alive, but the majority of the crowd thought the occasion was too solemn for cheer.

Victor Calher and his brother, Tony Calher, were two members of the party. Two more were John Deutkof and John Schilgock. All were Hungarians and not one of them could speak a word of English. This party of men was located in No. 4 left. They were in a room with one other man, who was killed.

The way they came to save their lives is interesting. Tony Calher, one of the most intelligent-looking of the party, told me this story, through an interpreter, while he was in the ambulance waiting to be taken to the Cambria hospital.

"When we heard and felt the explosion, near noon yesterday, we were all terrified. We were stunned and there seemed no hope for us to escape. We were all hurled violently to the ground on our faces and the gas was almost insufferable. I called to my brother as soon as I recovered my senses, and he answered me. I told him to come to me, and he did so, crawling on his hands and knees.

Saved by Presence of Mind.

"He got very close to me and then said he could come no further. I asked him why, and he told me he could not get over a great oval, which seemed to be between us. I did not at first dare to raise my head on account of the after-damp, but finally did so and discovered that what was keeping us apart was a large air pipe.

"I could not find my pick. I finally felt around and crawled until I found one, and then my brother and I started to work in earnest. We realized that we had but a little while to live and could feel the chill of death coming on us.

"We picked at the pipe until it yielded and allowed the air to circulate in our room. Then we started out to find all the miners we could and succeeded in getting seven other men. One poor fellow was dead before we got him, but we dragged him to the hole in the air pipe and there stayed until we were rescued this afternoon."

This party was all picked up in No. 4 left by Thomas Foster and a special rescuing party which had been formed from the general one. The eight men were loaded into ambulances and taken to Cambria hospital.

Telephone Message from Mine.

Shortly after the first eight were brought to the surface the cars were sent back. Marshal Moore then for the first time got into direct communication with the office by telephone from the dangerous part of the mine. The lines would not work during the morning. He told the office men that he had another trip ready when the cars came back and that seven men would be sent out.

This consignment came into the office yard at 3:30 o'clock. The cars were run much faster to and from the innermost part of the mines. When the second trip came the hospital corps started to work administering oxygen in the hope of saving the lives of the unfortunate men. All alive were unconscious. One of the seven died on the way out.

As the suffering men lay in the coal cars strewn with hay that they might ride a trifle easier, the physicians, under the leadership of Dr. J. B. Lowman of Cambria hospital, did all in their power to alleviate their suffering. The mouths of the men were closed and had to be pried

...RK OF RESCUING THE DEAD MINERS GOES SADLY ON

...oxygen was forced into their nostrils. The unfortunates, as they lay in the sun, with their eyes swollen, frothing at the mouth, blood oozing from their ears, and their lips swollen to almost twice their natural size, presented a horrible appearance. It was thought for a time that the six would die in their cars, but they were taken to the hospitals alive.

A Message of Despair.

"Thirty dead to come," was the next telephone message received from the mine and when that became known there was consternation among relatives of the entombed men in the crowd. They realized then that there was little hope for any of their relatives and the tears and wails were heart-rending.

The entire left section of the mine, except room No. 4, at sundown was yet to be searched. Joseph Orsho, who was a member of the rescuing party, came out with the second load of unfortunates. He said that right Nos. 4 and 6 had been searched and that the exploring and rescuing parties were giving their entire attention to the left side of the mine. He said there would be possibly 300 dead yet to come out of the mine. Most of these men had been discovered early in the afternoon, and as they were beyond all human help they were laid in a secluded spot and left while the rescuing party started to find the living, if there were any more.

The third trip of the cable coal cars furnished the most grewsome sight of the afternoon. The cars came swinging down at 4:30 o'clock and contained a cargo of 38 miners, all dead. When the cars came in sight they were covered with heavy blankets; and when the one covering the dead in the first car was removed, a large Hungarian woman on the bank near the Pennsylvania railroad bridge was seen to fall in a faint. She had recognized her husband. When she revived she asked if he was really dead, and when told the sad news in her native tongue, she begged to be killed with an anaesthetic, saying she desired to live no longer.

Unloaded Like Beef.

The matter of handling the dead bodies seemed inhuman, but it was not, and great credit is due to those in charge of the morgue ambulances, that they were able to convey the dead people so quickly to the morgue. The bodies were unloaded like carcasses of beef. They were placed on stretchers and taken immediately to the wagons.

State Mine Inspector Robert Evans, who came out with the last party, said there were two dead men left in No. 6 right, and there remained yet 39 rooms to be explored. Each of these rooms is supposed to accommodate three working miners, and the indications were that the finding of the dead bodies had only begun.

The body of George Holiday, a driver, was in the last load of dead miners. He was 24 years of age and married, living in Cambria City. When his wife learned that his body had been recovered and that her husband was really dead, she collapsed and is tonight in a precarious condition.

A survivor told a pathetic story at the Cambria hospital this afternoon. He said a fellow-Hungarian had his boy, 18 years old, by his side when the explosion came. He clasped the lad to his bosom for five minutes, then relinquished his hold and the boy dropped. The father was dead and the son died half an hour afterward.

Some Corpses in Fragments.

One of the most horrible sights during the unloading of the last cargo of the dead of the afternoon was the bringing to the morgue wagons of pieces of men's bodies. There was nothing left of one man but his head and shoulders. Another victim had his right side torn away, while still another's head was missing.

There were evidences of terrible struggles for life on every hand. Men with handkerchiefs tightly tied around their mouths and ropes were found and brought out, just as they were. One man had his miners' cap clutched tightly in his left hand and his face was cut beyond all recognition.

Many of the bodies cannot be identified, and until the official list of the missing is given by the Cambria Steel Company, made up from the numbered badges of the victims, there is no telling just how many yielded up their lives.

The body of Fire Boss Joseph Tomelson was pointed out by a number of boys in the crowd. They immediately began to cry. Apparently he was a popular man in the mine.

While standing on a stone wall with a large crowd, watching for the body of his brother, a Hungarian whose name could not be ascertained reeled and fell over the wall on his neck and is in a serious condition. He was taken to Cambria hospital.

WORK OF THE DOCTORS.

Method They Have Adopted for Treatment of the Surviving Victims of the Disaster.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., July 11.—(Special.)—The doctors have worked nobly today. This has been the treatment: Administration of oxygen in the ordinary manner; infusion of normal saline solution, with strychnine; intravenous injection of normal saline solution. The results have been highly satisfactory. This means injections of salt water, according to the latest practice among doctors. These have been discharged from the hospital as well: Frank Bumbocz, Jacob Ozeranz, John Lehr, John Dubko, John Sheika, A. M. Kahler, Joe Bal, George Salla, Albert Sheipa, John Kavomskie and Victor Kahler.

Dr. J. B. Lomond, who was in the mine last night and part of today and in attendance at the hospital during the afternoon, estimates the total loss of life at not more than 125. He says there are none alive in the place. Two men died in one room while the rescuers were trying to get to them. One died after being released. There will be few to bring out tomorrow.

FROM THE PULPITS.

The Mine Disaster Will Be the Theme at Every Church in Johnstown Tomorrow.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., July 11.—(Special.)—In nearly every church in Johnstown next Sunday the theme will be "The Rolling Mill Mine Horror." The ministers of all the congregations have decided to preach on the catastrophe, and the institutions of worship will be crowded.

Many of the collections lifted in the several churches on Sunday will be given to the families of the unfortunate miners who lost their lives in the disaster. In St. Mark's Protestant Episcopal church the Rev. A. D. Coyle of the Pittsburgh diocese will preach a special sermon on the mine disaster and a special collection will be taken up for the relatives of the dead miners.

In the Hospitals.

JOHNSTOWN, July 11.—Following are the injured being cared for at the hospitals: At Cambria county hospital—three unknown, condition critical; A. M. Kohler, Frank Bumberz, Jacob Ozeronz, John Feher, John Dudok, John Shika, Joe Balo, George Sala, Albert Serpha, John Kuminsky, Victor Kaher. At Conemaugh Memorial hospital—William Robinson, John Retaillck, Harry Rodgers, unknown Slav.

BRINGING OUT QUICK AND DEAD FROM THE TOMB

Throng of Loved Ones Watch Coming of the Laden Mine Cars.

JOY FOR ONLY A FEW

Despair Came to Many of the Anxious Families Grouped About Mine Entrance and Railroad—Trains With Victims Constantly Moving.

By NELSON KINGSLAND,
Staff Correspondent.

Johnstown, Pa., July 11.—Two hours before noon today word came to all in Johnstown, in that mysterious way that word does come in catastrophes like this, that another cargo of bodies was to be brought from the mine at once. Brighter news than this was that some among the grimy workers who had been caught by the firedamp were still breathing, for whom there was a chance for life.

That was enough. Men and women who had no motive but curiosity for venturing out, gathered at "the point" or about the armory, which had been converted into a morgue, and gazed across Stony creek at the tiny hole in the green-clad hillside, waiting for the coal-grimed cars with their unusual burden to appear.

Across the river there was another scene. There were no parasols there, no signs of holiday festivity, no laughing faces. There it was the dread waiting for news of life or death.

From the Town to the Mine.

The end of the mine railroad track is in Cambria City, and in Cambria City nearly all of the miners have their homes. First there is the bridge, then a muddy street leading to the mine company's office. On one side a brickyard; on the other, the river; between the two, the grimy, oily track with its clattering cable that hauls the coal from the depths of the mine to the open. Today the cable was still.

Ropes were stretched across the roadway from the company's shanty to the brickyards. Back up to the track were a half score of ambulances, undertaker's wagons and other conveyances, and pressing against the ropes, crowding the brick yard platform, on the roof, and at every point where a sight could be had of the narrow track that wound its way to the mine, were crowds of men and women as silent as the grave. All of them were eagerly watching that wire cable, which was not working today.

From early in the morning until the sun went down some of them waited there. Nearly all were foreigners. Few of them were able to speak the English language, but all were waiting for something tangible to bring either joy or sorrow and drive away that gnawing uncertainty that had kept them sleepless for 24 hours. The story had been told that some in the mine were living, and where there is life there is hope.

An Anxious Family Group.

In a corner nearest the coal company's office, close to the track, and close, too, to the sinister-looking ambulances, stood a crowd of Poles. In an angle of the temporary fence was a brawny, broad-shouldered man. Just behind him was a pale-faced girl still in her teens. Over her head was tied a black scarf. Next to her was a woman, perhaps her mother, with a bright yellow scarf about her head. For hours that trio stood there in the burning sun. The face of the girl was stained with tears, and now and then she would hide herself behind the broad shoulders of the man in front and only the infrequent movements of her body told of the grief she felt. She was a stranger in a strange land. Her father probably was dead, at least, he had not come home, and she could not tell anybody about it. She had no friends. That was all.

Then, a little before 3 o'clock, the cable began to move, slowly at first, but an assurance to the waiting people that something was coming from the dark depths beyond the curve.

"They's bringing out some men alive!" was the almost whispered sentence that passed from one to another.

The Poles did not know what the sentence meant, but they knew from the brighter faces about them that the news was good.

The cable began to move faster, and as the clatter of the wheels grew louder, every eye was turned to the curve in the train road under the stone bridge, where the cars could first be sighted.

The First Train Load.

It was 3 o'clock when the first train from the mine came in. There was a long string of empty coal cars that rumbled past the waiting throng. Then, far at the end, could be seen a group of miners, their lamps still burning, helping along the narrow pathway a number of men not utterly helpless. There were no cheers. The half-dazed men, their eyes blinded by the sunlight, were tenderly helped into the ambulances waiting to take them to the hospital; but women's eyes are quick to see when love is there, and each one knows whether or not the man she was looking for was in the party.

When the ambulances had gone there were but few vacant spaces in the crowd. Eight men out of so many missing made but little impression, and all eyes were turned to the track again, waiting for the next trip. It was 3:20 when the greasy cable began to move again, and at 3:30 there was another glimmer of hope as the friends of the stricken men helped six of their comrades out of the cars to the earth. But this time the physicians' aid was needed, too, and the unconscious forms were borne to the ambulance on stretchers. And, last of all, came one form, not rigid yet, so recently had death come, carried on a slab to a wagon and taken to the morgue. He had died on the way out.

This trip brought from the mine all that could be found who were still living. And still the women stayed. Their men—the man that each had missed for a night—had not come out yet and they were determined to know the truth.

Back to the pit-mouth went the mine cars and at 4:30 the cars were once more trundled into the death yard by the significant cable. This time the cars carried a gruesome freight indeed. There were 38 passengers, and all were dead.

Some of the miners live in Railroad street in Cambria City, and many a home in the homely thoroughfare was clouded by sudden grief today. Your correspondent passed one home there this afternoon where sorrow reigned with no outward manifestations to tell the world that grief was there. It was only a cottage.

There was but one room in all the house that was able to hold the coffin of the dead, and that room opened on the street. And there the coffin lay. The door was open. Within could be seen the black box. On the doorstep was a crowd of urchins, neighbors' children, unmoved by the presence of death. They were laughing and chatting together, and now and then one would glance up and look in wonderment at the scene within.

And well they might. In a rocking chair just within the door, sat a man, weeping a man's bitter tears. To his left was the long black box, containing the body of the miner who had been caught in the sudden disaster. At the head of the casket were two candles burning brightly—perhaps, unknowingly, a symbol of the candle that the dead man had carried to his work in the heart of the earth so long—and by the side of the coffin, on their knees, their hands uplifted in prayer, were two children.

That was the miner's home-coming.

Inspectors Williams of Altoona and Roby of Uniontown. They have inspected as far as is possible to do so, and have been unable to learn the cause of the disaster.

"I have not figured on what our total financial loss will be, but it will not reach over $50,000. We will go to work at once to repair the mine and build new walls. The Cambria Steel Company has already expended thousands of dollars to make their mine the safest in the country, and we shall spend thousands more to bring the mine back again.

"I want to say a word through The Gazette about men who have volunteered as rescuers. They are brave and fearless and have worked like trojans. We cannot begin to accept the services of one-eighth the men who volunteer."

garian government are already on the ground to protect the interests of their countrymen, many of whom were killed in the disaster. They say that if the company was to blame it will have to recompense the stricken families for the loss of the bread-winners.

No Need of Outside Relief.

The company already has announced that it will employ the Cambria Relief association in giving aid to those who need it, and to the sufferers from the explosion, whether they be injured or the relatives of the dead. Citizens of Johnstown are subscribing liberally to funds toward the same end, and it is announced that the city does not feel that the country should aid it in this matter, but thinks that with the assistance of the company all the sufferers can be placed beyond need.

The last sad act of this great tragedy begins tomorrow, when the first of the victims are to be buried. For days, perchance a week, the city will have a constant reminder of its loss in the mourning processions that will daily traverse its streets.

Many of the victims will be laid to their last resting place in historic old Grandview cemetery, where 1,200 dead of that other great disaster that befell Johnstown rest on the top of a great hill, overlooking the narrow little valley, against which destiny seems to hold a grudge.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., July 12.—Two members of the relief party sent home for a rest, said on leaving the mine shortly before 1 o'clock this morning, that 52 bodies were piled up ready to be brought out the first thing after daylight.

This does not mean that this number is all the dead yet in the mine, as at least two dangerous headings have yet resisted efforts to penetrate them.

A DOCTOR'S STORY.

He Tells How His party of Rescuers Found the Living and the Dead. Bodies Piled Up.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., July 11.—Dr. H. F. Tomb, who went into the mine with Dr. L. W. Jones and the rescuers at 9 o'clock this morning and came out with the 14 injured men brought out at 3 o'clock this afternoon, said tonight:

"We found the air good in the main heading upon going in, except on the left. We went to No. 6 section on the right and turned up as far as room No. 25. Then we began taking out dead miners. On going back to the main heading we turned back to No. 4 left, where we heard voices. There we found three foreigners in good condition. One of them was A. M. Kohler of Cambria City, whose ingenuity saved his life and those of his companions. When Kohler found they were trapped they jumped into a room through which a compressed air pipe passed. This he broke in some manner and the men, after closing the door with canvas, had plenty of good air. These men came out of the mine at 3 o'clock in fairly good condition. They told us there were numbers of living and dead up the heading.

"Not until we reached the 16th room did our eyes meet the most grewsome sight of our trip. In that room there were 34 dead and 15 living. They were piled upon one another, some of the living being buried underneath the dead. These were unconscious. We worked industriously on them with oxygen and spirits of ammonia. One died on the long trip out."

Anxious as to His Brother's Fate.

Police Officer Jacob Shiffire of the Millvale police force is very much concerned over the probable fate of his brother, John Shiffire, who was assistant fire inspector in the Rolling Mill mine at Johnstown. He has been unable to ascertain whether or not his brother escaped or whether he was on duty at the time of the explosion.

A VERMONT LADY'S Desperate Fight for Life.

Mrs. Nathan Beals Says:

Paine's Celery Compound

Saved Me from the Insane Hospital as Well as Cured My Rheumatism.

There never was a remedy so highly recommended as Paine's Celery Compound. There never was a remedy in such universal demand. It is popular and prized in tens of thousands of homes, because it makes sick people well.

Paine's Celery Compound has saved thousands from nervous prostration and collapse; it has effected wonderful cures in kidney and liver complaints; its victories over rheumatism and neuralgia have commanded the attention and admiration of our best physicians. It has cured disease when everything else has failed.

Mrs. Nathan Beals, a well known lady of Gallups Mills, Vt., writes as follows: "For ten months before I commenced taking Paine's Celery Compound I could not put my foot on the first round of my chair, only five inches from the floor. I had nearly lost the use of my left side, and I could not lift a pound weight with the left hand without danger of dropping it. Many times I would lift something at the table, only to drop it. I had a pressure in the top of my head and a pain at the base of the brain, which would leave me so nervous that I used to tell my husband I would surely go crazy. I could not keep still at night, and Sundays were just awful to me. I found my whole system prostrated, and it took a long time to build up my poor, worn-out nerves. I think that Paine's Celery Compound saved me from the insane hospital, as well as cured my rheumatism."

CONSOLIDATION OF BIG GOLD MINING INTERESTS

Plans Completed for a $3,000,000 Company

TO DEVELOP AND OPERATE MINES, MILLS AND TUNNELS IN COLORADO.

Leading Bankers, Manufacturers and Business Men Compose the Board of Directors.

Plans have recently been completed for a big Consolidation of Colorado Gold Mining interests, owned by Pittsburgh Capitalists, the Certificate of Incorporation having been filed with the Secretary of State at Denver, Colorado, on May 16th, in the name of "THE PITTSBURGH CONSOLIDATED MINING, MILLING & TUNNEL COMPANY," of Colorado, with a Capital Stock of $3,000,000. The object of the new Company is to operate under one management several valuable Mining properties, located in Clear Creek County, Colorado, and owned by prominent Pittsburgh Bankers, Manufacturers and Business Men.

The Consolidation will embrace the following well-known Companies and properties: The Dover Gold Mining Company, The Brighton Gold Mining Company, The Pittsburgh Transportation Tunnel, The Osborn Placer and Mill site and twelve additional lode claims adjoining these properties. This will give the new Company 24 lode claims and one placer claim, a total of about 125 acres in all.

The development work already done consists of about 1,700 feet of shafting, tunnels, drifting, levels, up-raises and crosscuts. On the Dover Mines there is a fine large shaft house building, containing a complete outfit of the most modern hoisting machinery, capable of sinking the shaft to 2,000 feet. A duplicate of this plant has been ordered for the Brighton Mines. It is also the intention of the Company, as soon as arrangements can be completed, to build a 100-Ton Stamp and Concentrating Mill on the Osborn Placer, which adjoins the Dover Mines.

The Board of Directors comprises such well-known financiers and business men as: M. Laird, President of the North American Savings Bank and President of the W. M. Laird Shoe Company; Francis J. Torrance, Vice President of the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company and President of the Western Pennsylvania Exposition Society; Hon. Walter Lyon, ex-Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania; A. W. Duff, President of the First National Bank of Wilkinsburg and President of the Penn Heat and Power Company; Charles Bailey, President The Reliance Steel Company; C. W. Pratt of Bayne, Wilson & Pratt and National Supply Company; J. R. Anderson, Secretary and Treasurer of the Equitable Investment Company; Charles H. Lloyd, President The Lloyd Manufacturing Co., and W. Reed McCabe, Capitalist. At the Directors' Organization Meeting, which was held last week, the following officers were elected: J. R. Anderson, President; W. M. Laird, Vice President; C. H. Lloyd, Treasurer, and W. Reed McCabe, Secretary.

The offices of the company are in the Bank for Savings Building, corner of Fourth Ave. and Smithfield St.

With such a lot of fine properties, located in the center of the Colorado Gold Belt, as shown by the Official Map issued from the United States Surveyor General's Office in Denver, and a board of Directors such as the company can justly boast of, to manage the affairs of this Pittsburgh Enterprise, the outlook for the future of "The Pittsburgh Consolidated Company" is certainly very bright and the stockholders of which there are already about 500 in the various companies entering the consolidation, are to be congratulated on having stock in such a promising organization, which is considered by mining experts as one of the finest mining propositions in Colorado and one in which no person interested in mining investments need hesitate to purchase stock.

That The Pittsburgh Consolidated Company will be a success and prove to be a big and lasting dividend-payer is a foregone conclusion.

AUSTRIAN GOVERNMENT TO INVESTIGATE DISASTER

AUSTRIA MAY BEGIN SUITS FOR DAMAGES

Consul Wein and Assistant on the Scene to Probe the Matter.

COL. HALL HIS LEGAL ADVISER

Foreign Representative Has Satisfactory Interviews With Officials.

VICTIMS' ESTATES WILL BE PROTECTED

By GEORGE A. CAMPSEY,
Staff Correspondent.

Johnstown, Pa., July 11.—As a result of the mine disaster, proceedings in court probably will be brought against the officials of the company by the Austro-Hungary consulate in Pittsburgh.

J. Wein, consul, with Alexander Neuber of Pittsburgh, in company with W. Helmsy, his assistant, arrived in Johnstown this evening and at once proceeded to the offices of the Cambria Steel Company to learn the causes of the disaster and also to find out the number of subjects from his country who perished.

The representatives of the Austro-Hungarian government were immediately accorded interviews with Powell Stackhouse, president of the Cambria Steel Company, and Charles Price, general manager of the mines. Late tonight Consul Wein told The Gazette correspondent that the result of his interview with the officials had been entirely satisfactory, and that he had been received with the greatest courtesy. Consul Wein also said the Cambria Steel Company officials declared they did not know the cause of the calamity, and that it would be investigated with all possible haste. The officials gave the consul to understand that they would use their relief fund to the utmost advantage for the widows and orphans of the dead men.

Accompanied by a Priest.

Consul Wein and Assistant Consul Helmsy were accompanied on their visit to the steel company's officials by the Rev. Father John Martvon, priest of St. Stephen's Slavish church of Johnstown.

In speaking further of his official visit to Johnstown tonight, Consul Wein said: "This is a terrible calamity to subjects of our government residing here. Among our subjects killed in the mine explosion were Poles, Slovacks, Magyars, Croatians, Krajns, Ruthenians, Austrians and Hungarians. The majority of these people have not as yet become citizens of the United States, nor taken out their first naturalization papers, and, consequently, they are our own people.

"It seems to be the custom of American companies employing foreign labor, especially subjects of ours, to put them in the hardest and most dangerous places. It is quite true they are rather ignorant when they come here, but they are human beings, and they should receive treatment as such.

"We must protect our citizens against such accidents if it is possible to do so. Where there is apparently no one to blame, then it is entirely out of our jurisdiction and we have nothing to say.

Property to Be Looked After.

"Another matter, and one of all importance, too. When such accidents as this occur, many of our subjects are killed as the result. These persons often have estates in this country. We are a prosperous and thrifty people, and our subjects who come to this country often have considerable money laid by in a few years. We must protect these estates. We must see that the widows and orphans of these people are protected, as far as possible, and when they are in our own country it is our duty to settle their estates and make a proper accounting of them to those dear ones on the other side of the ocean.

"The relatives in this country, if very near, also must be protected. If we should not come in and settle these estates, they would be grabbed by financial sharks and hyenas who take a pleasure in any such a great misfortune as this for the sake of making a paltry sum.

"It is our business to induce the companies, as far as possible, to divide the mutual benefit funds and to ascertain any rights of recovery the widows and orphans or other relatives may have. It is an act of charity, as well as of humanitarianism, if we have legal grounds to recover, we want to do so on behalf of the relatives of the victims, if the companies do not compensate the families liberally."

Col. Hall Likely to File Suits.

"This appalling disaster looks now as if there was connected with it criminal negligence on the part of some one. Whether it is on the part of the company or some of its employes, remains to be yet ascertained.

"It is quite probable, from all present indications, that the list of suits to be filed against large companies throughout Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia by Col. Harry Alvin Hall, our legal adviser in Pittsburgh, will include the Cambria Steel Company, and we will have recourse to the courts in behalf of relatives of the victims in this disaster."

NEARLY GAVE UP HIS OWN LIFE TO RESCUE OTHERS

John T. Mayer, After Escaping Unhurt, Rushes in to Save Men.

OVERCOME BY THE DAMP

Dragged Out in Time to Escape Death—Tells of His Experience. Stoically Tells of the Chances He Is Willing to Run.

By CHARLES E. LOCKE, JR.,
Staff Correspondent.

Johnstown, Pa., July 11.—John T. Mayer was one of the men who was working in the Klondike section that escaped on Thursday after the explosion. He came out of the Westmont slope and reached the surface without any mishap. With him came the 11 men who were working in the room with him.

After he got out it was learned that many of the men had been overcome, and Mayer was one of the first to volunteer to go back to save them, if possible. Back into the mine he went, although by this time the deadly afterdamp was gathering. He went in more than a mile, almost to the Klondike section, and then, overcome by the combined effects of the exertion of running to the mouth of the mine and of the gas, he fell and was carried out by two of his companions. It was found that the rescue would have to be abandoned for the time if any of the party wished to reach the open air alive.

Mayer runs one of the electric mining machines and the 11 men working with him loaded the coal which the machine cut out. The other men were all foreigners. This is the case all through the mine in the places where the machines are used—the English-speaking men run the machines and the foreigners load the coal.

Mayer tells a very graphic story of the scenes in the mine at the time of the explosion.

"I was working in No. 4 heading in the Klondike," he said, "which is just four headings, or about 1,200 feet, from No. 6, where the explosion occurred. I was sitting on the board running the machine when I felt the concussion. It was so strong that it knocked me off my seat. In an instant there was a rush of scorching heat that was almost unbearable, but the flames did not extend down so far as the heading by which I was working. I knew in an instant what had happened and started for the Westmont opening, calling to the men to follow. In the main heading it was hot, but the air was not so bad, because the after-damp had not had time to gather, and we made good progress.

"Finally we reached the top and then found that there were others that had been so fortunate, and, without stopping for a moment, we went back. The others would have done as much for me, and without thinking that it was anything but the natural thing to do. The second trip though was too much for me, and I had to be carried out; but I revived soon after reaching the air. The second time we also came out the Westmont shaft."

"Will the miners go back to work in the mine after this accident?" was asked.

"Of course they will. Why should not they?" was the reply. "I would go back tomorrow if the mine was running. I must make a living, and I can do it down in the mine, while maybe I could not above ground. It is simply taking a chance all the time and it would not be any more dangerous to go in after the mine gets cleared of gas than it was on Thursday morning. I was lucky this time; may be I won't be the next time. We have to run the risk."

With this Mayer turned around to go on with his work of helping to dress some of his fellow-workers who had not been so "lucky." He had volunteered to assist in the work last night at the morgue and to take the place of some of those who had been worn out by the awful labors of yesterday.

His statement is a fair indication of the way the survivors feel.

NO CORONER'S INQUEST FOR SEVERAL DAYS

Mine Must Be Officially Inspected First, and That Cannot Be Done While Gas Remains.

By CHARLES E. LOCKE, JR.,
Staff Correspondent.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., July 11.—The investigation by the county authorities into the causes of the explosion will not be made for several days, and nothing will be done in this direction until all the bodies are recovered and the mine has been thoroughly examined by the state inspectors.

Dr. E. L. Miller, coroner of Cambria county, whose home is in this city, was at the morgue when the first bodies were brought there yesterday morning, and he viewed all the remains taken there during the day.

"It is too early now to make any statement as to the cause of the accident. I will view all the bodies as they are recovered, and after all are out of the mine the coroner's jury will be impanelled.

"I intend to make a rigid investigation into this case. If there has been any negligence on the part of the officials of the company the public will know it, and they will know, too, if the facts of the case exonerate them.

"It will be useless to begin an inquest until the mine inspectors have had an opportunity to inspect the mine, and they cannot do this until all the gas has been driven out."

INVESTIGATION TO COME

State Mining Department Will Try to Fix Responsibility if Any One Is to Blame—Chief Roderick Visits the Scene.

By JAMES B. SANSOM,
Staff Correspondent.

Johnstown, Pa., July 11.—Stirred by the extent and deadliness of yesterday's disaster, the state department of mine inspection is taking prompt steps toward having the cause of the explosion discovered and responsibility placed upon the proper shoulders, if anyone can be blamed.

Chief Inspector J. E. Roderick of Scranton arrived here this evening and immediately went to the home of District Inspector Josiah T. Evans, where the two were in close consultation until a late hour. Inspector Evans had been in the mine from 6 o'clock on the evening of the explosion until 7 last night.

Chief Roderick refused to make any statement last night, saying he could not do so intelligently until he had conferred further with his subordinate and made a personal investigation of the mine.

Inspector Evans last night gave this interview as to the conditions in the mine, and repudiates the interview with him published this morning, in which he was reported as saying the mine was full of dangerous gases:

"I inspected the Rolling Mill mine three weeks ago and found it to be in fair condition. As a rule it was remarkably free from gas; but in one spot I detected its presence and posted the customary danger sign. A young Slav shortly afterward deliberately walked into the pocket with his lamp alight and courted death to tear down the warning.

"The ventilation was good and the general conditions in the mine were good. Nevertheless the explosion was due to gas, ignited in some way. In all my experience I never saw such a small explosion cause such widespread death.

"The actual property damage will be insignificant. Of course considerable repair work will be necessary, and operations in the mine are stopped by the work of rescue, but the actual damage done by the explosion is surprisingly slight. The mine now is in good shape and work can be resumed as soon as the work of rescue is finished and the tracks cleared.

"I hope this rescue work will be finished within the next two days. There yet at 7 o'clock tonight remain two entire headings unexplored and two more partially unexplored. I can make no estimate of the total number of fatalities.

"I will not make my report for some time yet. After the rescue work is complete I will devote myself to a close examination of the mine and anything that will aid in making my report."

CARNEGIE BAND ARRESTED

Musicians Taken Into Custody for Marching Through Streets of Leechburg.

LEECHBURG, PA., July 11.—(Special.)—There was quite an exciting time on the streets of this town tonight when the Carnegie band of Carnegie, Pa., which has been camped here for several weeks, was arrested for marching on the streets. The arrests were made on a warrant sworn out by the manager of the J. G. Beal & Co. coal works.

The burgess had issued a restraining order last night prohibiting the band members annoying men coming from work in the mines, but this evening, it is alleged, they disregarded the order and the result was 12 of them were locked up. They left their instruments for security and were released to await a hearing Saturday morning.

GRIM REMINDERS OF THE BIG FLOOD

CARLOADS OF DEAD PASS VORTEX OF FORMER DISASTER.

Fire Kindled to Burn Tattered Clothing Hard by the Site of the Vast Funeral Pyre of Thirteen Years Ago—Few Noted the Coincidence.

By ALFRED R. CRUM,
Staff Correspondent.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., July 11.—Early this morning a train of rumbling mine cars carried 48 victims of the Rolling Mill disaster down the slope from the pit mouth to the checking office, passing through one of the arches of the famous stone railroad bridge, against which the debris of the historic flood piled 13 years ago.

They were taken from the Westmont opening on the hillside above Stony creek, overlooking the spot where the mad waters piled corpses thickest. From the mine opening a stone could be thrown into the very center of that overtex of death that has become a legend to the present population of Johnstown, but will never be effaced from the memories of those who gazed upon the tangled mass.

Down that incline on the bank of Stony creek and through the arch of the Conemaugh bridge during the afternoon, came more dead, and the half dead whom doctors and nurses at the hospital are trying to restore to life. While the cars were rumbling down, bearing rescued and heroic rescuers, a fire was kindled on the point of land where Stony creek empties into the Conemaugh, to burn the tattered clothing stripped from the first victims, with the morgue in the background.

The hundreds of curious gathered about the morgue, strolling out to where the fire burned, or gazing across the creek at the rescue train, trampled the ground where more than 1,500 bodies were burned in the vast funeral pyre of 13 years ago, though few in the crowd seemed aware of the fact.

MORBID CROWD FILLS THE STABLE MORGUE

The Widows and Orphans Who Had a Right to Be There Crowded to the Background.

By NELSON KINGSLAND,
Staff Correspondent.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., July 11.—Nearly all of the bodies of the miners who died in the mine that were brought out today eventually were taken to Brady's undertaking shop in Cambria City. The place is really a stable.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon there were 27 bodies in this stable. They were arranged on slabs along one side of the building. There were hearses and wagons on the outer side. A line of rope was stretched just outside the row of white-shrouded forms of the dead, and that was all.

The public was allowed to enter at will, and men women and children gathered in crowds to witness the gruesome scene. A few who came had a right to come. There were perhaps half a dozen women there, two of them with babes at their breasts, whose husbands lay dead in that crowded stable; but they were in the background.

Crowded against the ropes were a morbid throng, feasting its eyes on the ghastly scene before it, while the undertaker's assistants lifted the sheets from the bodies and jammed on the shrouds that they were to wear to the grave. To add to the ugliness of the scene, a man placed to and fro, crying out at intervals:

"Don't crowd. Keep back of the ropes."

In a farther corner the coffins were being made ready to receive the dead; and listening to it all, half dazed by the shock of the calamity, hardly realizing their loss, were the women who alone had the right to be there with their dead.

TO CONTINUE TOMORROW

Arrangements for Obsequies of American Dead Not Yet Completed. Mayor Hendry Says No Public Relief Is Needed.

By CHARLES E. LOCKE, JR.,
Staff Correspondent.

Johnstown, Pa., July 11.—Tomorrow will be a day of funerals in Cambria City, where most of the foreigners who lost their lives in the explosion in the Mill mine made their homes. All day today and all night the wagons of the undertakers were busy carrying the bodies from the morgue to the undertaking shops, and then to the homes. Before daybreck nearly all of those whose bodies were recovered last evening will be in their homes.

A special order for caskets had been sent to Pittsburgh by the undertakers, and the coffins began to arrive early in the afternoon. As fast as they were received the bodies were placed in them and were then taken to the victims' dwellings.

Father Dembrinski of St. Casimir church will have charge of the funerals. The first of them will be held in the morning and they will continue all day, and perhaps most of next day.

The priest of the parish has been unremitting in his toil, both in taking care of the living and in looking after the dead. He was at the mouth of the Mill creek shaft most of last night, and was at the morgue early this morning, and throughout the day lending his assistance in the identification of the bodies.

"Most of them were members of my church, he said, "and they were good men. I have worked among them, and it will be my duty to perform for them the last rites."

The arrangements for the funerals of the Americans who were brought out dead have not been made.

Early in the day the daily papers here announced that a fund had been started for the benefit of the families of the miners who were killed in the disaster.

Mayor John Hendry was asked this afternoon whether he would take any official action in regard to the collection of money and toward extending aid to the stricken families. Mr. Hendry is an undertaker, and he is one of the men who had charge of the affairs at the morgue, but he took time to tell what he thought of the matter. He said:

"I do not believe it will be necessary to take any measures for immediate relief. Every man working for the Cambria Steel Company is a member of the Voluntary Relief association. This association, on the death of a member, pays his family $1,000. The company, of course, will take care of the burial of the victims, and with the amount coming from the association the condition of the families will not be serious enough to warrant any appeal to the public for relief."

Father Dembrinski, pastor of St. Casimir church, to which many of the miners belonged, said, when asked about the condition of the families, that most of his parishioners were a thrifty set of men and had some money. He said that, of course, in some cases where there were large families, there might be some suffering; but he thought these cases could be taken care of without making an appeal to the public.

WILL ACT IF NECESSARY.

Necessities of Distress Caused by Johnstown Calamity Will Govern Chamber of Commerce Action.

The Pittsburgh chamber of commerce, which has always been prompt in raising funds for the relief of sufferers in disaster, will probably take action in regard to the Johnstown mine calamity as soon as the full extent of it is known and the necessities of the case apparent.

George H. Anderson, secretary of the chamber, said yesterday that a meeting could be held on a day's notice, but that it would not be wise to issue a call just now. "I presume," he said, "that the principal officials of the chamber will look into the matter and call a meeting within the next day or two."

DISTRESSING SCENES AS RELATIVES GATHER AT THE MORGUE

Cries of Grief and Moans of Sorrow Resound as Victims Are Recognized.

LONG DAY OF SADNESS

Gruesome Scenes as Wagons Loaded With Charred Bodies of the Dead Are Driven Up to the Armory—Attendants Made Ill.

By GIBBONS MARSH,
Staff Correspondent.

Johnstown, Pa., July 11.—The scene at the morgue told the horrors of the catastrophe. During the day there were 86 charred, bruised, blistered, bleeding bodies taken from the pit of the Westmont opening and placed on crude unplaned boards in the shed-like structure of the armory of Company H, which has been turned into a dead house.

The incidents here during the day were grewsome and pathetic. From an early hour this morning until late this evening the building was surrounded by hundreds of frantic mothers, terrified sisters, crazed wives and brothers of the victims of the explosion, together with a great throng of curious onlookers.

All were painfully mute until the first victim was hauled from the opening of the Westmont section of the mine across Stony creek to be prepared for identification and burial. It was just 6:30 o'clock when the dead wagon hove in sight at the armory, with the remains of John Ropinsky, the first dead man to be taken from the mine. This was a signal that Johnstown's second black day had been commenced. The wagon backed up to the side of the building and the blackened remains of Ropinsky were laid on the rough boards.

With Moans of Sorrow.

In a few minutes a second wagon came in sight. In this vehicle there were loaded six miners, charred, bleeding, dead. The attendants lost no time in taking their scorched clothing from their bodies and placing them on the oak planks.

The crowd was made up mostly of women. They squeezed close to the dead wagon to get a glimpse of each victim as he was being removed. When the bodies were taken from the vehicle there was a groan of horror from the onlookers. The sight sickened them. After the body was passed into the armory the thought would occur to some mother, sister or wife that the dead man might have been her loved one, and then cries could be heard among them.

During the morning there were 47 bodies taken to this morgue. The sight was awful. The men were placed on stretchers, carried over to the south side of the room and put on the floor. Their clothes were stained with coal tar. Their faces were black from burns and coal dust. Side by side they were placed in the long room. The attendants started to cut their clothing from them. As soon as the burned garments were taken off a victim he was picked up by two large men by its hands and feet and carried to a slab constructed of two unplaned boards fastened together by two strips, and resting on a couple of chairs. The naked man was laid there and washed with warm water and soap.

Bodies Grewsomely Contorted.

Their bodies and limbs were twisted into all sorts of weird shapes. Their features seemed the wild work of some grotesque artist rather than that of nature. Their limbs were bent and charred. On some of those who met their end near the mouth of the pit there was a peaceful, calm expression. They had died a painless death from suffocation. The others had suffered from the flames of the explosion.

One by one the bodies were stripped and cleaned. They were carried to the east end of the shed and laid on another plank slab, which was covered with a sheet. Another sheet was thrown over them. Here they remained until they were identified by relatives and taken away.

Their clothing was swept into a large piece of canvas, taken from the place and burned.

At 2 o'clock the last of the 47 victims had been removed from the building. They had been identified and sent to their homes. About an hour after this came the announcement that 38 other dead had been found and were being brought to the morgue. Another man died as he was being lifted into an ambulance.

The slabs were placed about the building and the embalming fluid and instruments were scattered about the room. At 4 o'clock the first of the victims arrived. He was an unfortunate Hungarian who was caught in the explosion, and his face and body was frightfully charred. He was carried over to the side of the building and laid on the floor.

Reveals Tale of Torture.

The workmen were rushed and they picked him up and hurried with him across the floor to a cleaning slab where the grim, black coal dust was washed away only to reveal the horrible tale of suffering told by his features.

A gong sounded outside of the shed, and the doors were thrown open. A vehicle had arrived carrying six more dead. They had been cast into the wagon hurriedly, and were lying with their faces down and on top of one another. The sight of them when the wagon passed was sickening.

Then the rush was resumed. Chief of Police John Harris was in charge of the 25 attendants. They took the stretchers and one by one the victims were laid out in a row on the floor. The wagons were massed outside of the building. They were loaded down with 38 bodies. As one vehicle was unloaded another drove up to the door, and its contents were taken in the great shed. These men laid on the floor in four rows.

There was a hustle and bustle about the place. Men carrying dead across the room, several at a time, was a sight that will live long in the memories of those who witnessed it. These bodies were dropped on the slabs, and the attendants went at them with scrubbing brushes. In a few seconds it was almost surprising to see that the black charred object that had been conveyed across the floor a moment before was really a human person.

Seeking for Lost Ones.

At 5 o'clock many of the wives and sisters of these unfortunate men were beginning to gather outside to see the faces of the dead miners. When they were admitted the scene was heartrending. These poor women, unable to speak English, went among these victims, raising the shrouds from the disfigured features, hoping to find a lost husband or father.

The sobs and cries rang through the building. One aged Hungarian woman raised the shroud from the face of her husband. Instantly she put her hands to her face and screamed. She then fondled his features and seemed to be saying soothing words to the poor dead clay. The attendants took her away, but she broke away from them and went to the other end of the slab. Raising the shroud from his naked body she stroked his ankles.

Other women shrank with horror to find their husbands are burned and blistered. They appeared most grateful when the interpreter approached them and in their own language told them to go away, that the bodies of their dead would soon be sent to their homes.

An unusual amount of money was found on the persons of the dead. Bronislew Wetnewsky had $750 in his pockets. On five Hungarians $3,000 was found. One man had $1,300 in gold in a belt. This money was turned over to Coroner E. L. Miller.

Attendants Are Made Ill.

After the officers of the Cambria mine have completed their investigation of the catastrophe the coroner will make an investigation. At that time this money will be turned over to the relatives of the dead miners. Coroner Miller was most active during the afternoon. He was constantly in attendance at the morgue. When any one of the victims was identified he would take an interpreter to the relatives and assure them he would see that the body of the dead man would be sent home.

Late in the afternoon the attendants in the morgue were beginning to feel the effects of their grewsome work. Several were taken ill and had to leave the place. The officers of the board of health came to the morgue this afternoon and gave each one some disinfectant to apply after handling the charred remains.

The odor of the burnt clothing was also becoming noticeable. The place seemed to be insufferably hot. The red disinfectant that was being thrown about the floor dried the nostrils of the attendants and made a bloody background to the awful scene.

The crowd was beginning to disperse from around the building when a report came in that 17 more dead miners had been found and they were about to be brought to the morgue.

The victims were robed and placed in caskets. Some of them were taken to Cambria, the home of many of the miners who perished in the disaster.

RELIEF POURING IN FROM ALL SOURCES

Amount Collected Already $1,000. Even Newsboys Contribute—All Sorts of Benefit Projects.

By GEORGE A. CAMPSEY.
Staff Correspondent.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., July 11.—Relief for the families of the dead miners is pouring in here from all sources. The fund late this evening reached an even $1,000 and there is more money to be paid in tomorrow. By tomorrow night it is confidently expected the amount contributed will reach fully $2,000.

This city is the most enthusiastic in the country for raising funds for the needy. Many of the citizens experienced what it meant to be destitute 13 years ago and now all are turning in to help the members of the families of the unfortunate victims of the Rolling Mill disaster.

Even the newsboys on the streets helped swell the general fund here today, and when they made a special sale of papers would rush to the nearest newspaper office and deposit a certain part of the earnings, saving only enough to buy a fresh stock of papers and get out in the streets again.

The Johnstown Democrat fund amounts to almost $300. The Johnstown Tribune fund reaches $325. The amount received by Chief Burgess Herrick Thomas of Winber equals about $80, and the contributions received at the United States National bank foot up $150. The First National bank has $110.

Benefits of all sorts are being planned for the widows and orphans of the unfortunate victims. Bazars have been announced, picnics are scheduled, balls are to be given, and the Johnstown baseball team will play a special benefit game tomorrow at Roxbury park.

ONE DEAD VICTIM HAD HIS WARNING

NEARLY KEPT FROM GOING TO WORK BY A PRESENTIMENT.

His Wife Chided His Fears, and He Went to His Death—The Second Husband to Be Killed in a Mine, and the Woman Is Prostrated.

By JAMES B. SANSOM,
Staff Correspondent.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., July 11.—John Thomas, one of the oldest miners of the ill-fated Klondike section, had a premonition of the fate that was to befall him, and with the superstition of an old miner, he went into the mine for what proved to be the last time.

Thomas was 60 years of age and had been one of the most trusted of the employes of the mine. Yesterday morning, after he had donned his working clothes and eaten his breakfast, he loitered about his home in a strange manner for one who was usually so industrious. In response to repeated queries from his wife, he finally confessed his reluctance to go to work, and said he believed he would lay off for a day.

His wife, unable to understand his presentiment, and knowing he was in perfect health, chided him for a while with no effect. Finally, summoning all his resolution, he picked up his dinner pail and started. After he had gone some distance he returned to the house, but Mrs. Thomas rallied him again and he once more sat forth. As he left the house, however, he turned back and said in a peculiar tone: "Well, I may never come back again," and started away, leaving Mrs. Thomas, wondering at his strange words and conduct.

He went to work as usual when he reached the mine, but remarked to some of his companions that he "felt as though something was going to happen."

He was caught in the first rush of the deadly afterdamp, which followed the explosion, and his dead body was the first which the rescuers stumbled over, and the first to be removed from the mine.

Mrs. Thomas, as soon as she heard that a disaster had occurred, recalled her husband's parting words and prepared for the worst. When a kind-hearted neighbor attempted to break the news to her gently, she said: "Oh, don't be afraid to tell me; I know that something has happened to John."

The first husband of Mrs. Thomas also was a miner and was killed in a mine accident at Connellsville, just 15 years ago yesterday. She is prostrated over the second fatality of the kind in her married life.

HUMAN NATURE IN MANY PHASES COMES TO LIGHT

A Day of Sorrow, Anxiety, Strain, Heroism and Morbid Curiosity.

SYMPATHY ON ALL SIDES

Loss of Life Known to Be the Greatest Ever Suffered in a Western Pennsylvania Mine Disaster—End of Search Near.

By ALFRED R. CRUM,
Staff Correspondent.

Johnstown, Pa., July 11.—It has been a day of sorrow, anxiety, strain and heroism. Fifteen men have been snatched from the jaws of death and restored to their dear ones by the tremendous exertions of men who themselves faced death in awful form for the sake of others.

One hundred and five dead, many cruelly mangled, have been carried from the scene of their terrible end, and all but a few have been identified. The end of the struggle is near, but will not soon be forgotten.

No man knows the cause of the accident. The fatal mine has always been carefully managed, and this is its first explosion.

Engineer Moore believes there was negligence on the part of employes, and there are facts to support this theory. The exact cause probably will never be known. The company has done everything in human power to forward the work of rescue and care for the dead.

Some of the scenes are impossible of description. Dumb grief is terrible. There has been warm sympathy on all sides, and there has been a painful exhibition of morbid curiosity. Human nature has been laid bare in many phases.

Tomorrow probably will witness the removal of the last bodies from the mine. There are probably 20 or 30 yet to come. Some miners say there are 50; the officials favor the lower figures. At any rate, the loss of life is the greatest ever suffered from a mine explosion in Western Pennsylvania.

The mine is a drift. The openings are about 40 feet above water level in the streams, and there is but a slight dip in the workings, which ramify over many miles. It has been easier to get at than the deep shafts of the Connellsville region, so all the truth will be sooner known.

TWICE-STRICKEN CITY WARM WITH SYMPATHY

Alien Nationalities Forgotten in the Feeling of Commiseration. Work of Clergy.

BY JAMES B. SANSOM,
Staff Correspondent.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., July 11.—Johnstown still bears the appearance of a stricken city. Quiet crowds throng the streets discussing in subdued tones the disaster. Bulletins at the newspaper offices are surrounded by anxious relatives of the missing. Around the temporary morgue a great throng waits patiently all the time, while the Westmont drift of the ill-fated mine has to be roped off from the weeping families of the entombed miners.

Business has not been suspended, but it is still transacted in a perfunctory way and the question on every tongue is, "What news from the mine?" There is a subdued air about the city and the clang of the ambulance gongs rolling from the mine entrance to the morgue and hospitals is the only sound that seems to attract attention.

At intervals all too frequent the black wagon of an undertaker speeds to the morgue and then away again, bearing one of the victims who was not too badly burned to be identified. Its passage invariably throws a hush over the crowded streets that betokens the deep feeling of this twice stricken city.

Patients crowd into the offices of the physicians, only to find that they are on duty in the mine or at the hospitals and forget their own ills in the contemplation of the awful loss that is reaching into so many scores of homes in the city and its suburbs. Ministers and priests hurry hither and thither, bent on their errands of consolation and help to the wounded and the families of those whose blackened bodies lie at home, at the morgue or in the mines. In no place in all the world is the depth and tenderness of human sympathy more evident than in stricken Johnstown.

The memory of that awful day 13 years ago, when almost every home suffered the loss of a loved one, have been revived by this disaster; and despite the fact that most of the victims of yesterday are foreigners, unknown to their American neighbors, many of them only a few months from the soil of Poland and Austro-Hungary, there is a wealth of sympathy and a great desire to do something that will make the lot of the sufferers less hard.

Every fresh rumor from the black depths where the rescuers are groping for the dead and injured sends a fresh thrill through the sensitive crowds and they crowd around eagerly to hear its import. Such is Johnstown tonight—a stricken city, with all the darkness of a great disaster hanging over her.

PREDICTED A CALAMITY.

Chief Inspector Roderick Foresaw in His Report Danger From Electric Mining Machines.

HARRISBURG, PA., July 11.—The last annual report of James E. Roderick, chief of the state bureau of mines, who has been ordered by Gov. Stone to investigate the cause of the Johnstown mine disaster, shows that in the production of bituminous coal in Pennsylvania last year 301 persons were killed and 659 injured. A large majority of these accidents occurred underground, and 72 per cent of the victims were miners or their helpers.

Mr. Roderick predicts in the report that if electricity is allowed to be used in gaseous mines, it eventually will be the cause of a terrible accident.

The report of Inspector Evans, who has charge of the district in which the Johnstown mines are located, shows that at the last inspection the Rolling Mill mine was in good condition and that the company owning it complied with the law with regard to ventilation and other means of safety. Mr. Roderick says in the introduction to his report that the mines in Pennsylvania generally are in good condition as to ventilation and drainage, and that he is satisfied with the general work of the inspectors.

WANT OF FUEL WILL NOT SHUT DOWN MILLS

Managers Contracting for Sufficient Coal to Keep Them Going.

FEAR NO LACK OF MINERS

But They Will Not Be Put to Work Until Danger Is Over—Many Dead Mules Taken Out—Made Into Fertilizers.

By GEORGE A. CAMPSEY,
Staff Correspondent.

Johnstown, Pa., July 11.—"The Cambria Steel Company's works will not be shut down for a day on account of the mine disaster," said Charles Price, general manager of the entire mine interests of the Cambria Steel Company, late tonight. The statement was made in Mr. Price's private office near the Westmont entrance to the ill-fated mine, and he produced contracts to show that he has enough coal en route to Johnstown to keep the works running for at least two weeks. The coal was purchased from the Westmoreland and South Fork mines.

"I have spent the day booking coal orders so that the works might not have to shut down. We consume about 4,000 tons of coal a day on an average. Our mine produces about 2,500 tons. We employ over 700 men on night and day shifts in the mine, and we hope to have the mine in full operation again by the latter part of next week.

"In our steel works 11,800 men are employed daily. The mine which has caused all the trouble was first started in 1861, 41 years ago, by James Morely, who conducted it for the Cambria Steel Company about 20 years. We will not have the least difficulty in getting men to resume operations in the mine. From the number of applications we have each day to go into the mine as rescuers, you may judge that in a few days the men will want to go to work. We will not allow them to do anything in the mine but rescue the dead bodies of the miners until the danger is all over.

"My estimate of the men yet in the mine is 50, and all dead. What we could not reach today have perished.

"Personally, I do not believe we will ever know just exactly what caused the accident. No living man knows, and the chances are against the mystery ever being cleared up."

When the report became known in Johnstown late tonight that 17 more men had been found in No. 6 right, it was the signal for thousands to wend their way across the river to the Westmont entrance. Even near midnight women came by the scores and the suspense in many quarters is still great. Families and relatives of those employed in the mine are still hoping against hope that they may be yet brought out in safety.

"The bodies will be brought out as fast as they can be found and loaded upon cars," was the statement an official of the Cambria Steel Company made to me tonight. It never has been the policy of this company to conceal anything from the public and I may say that this disaster has been just as hard a blow to the higher officials of the company as if they had personally been bereft of relatives."

Up until midnight the new rescuing party under command of Assistant Superintendent Charles Croker had made no very important discoveries. The men were working vigorously, but dared not venture near any of the four headings which are yet in danger. These headings are all being watched, however, and at the earliest possible moment they will be explored and the dead will be brought to the morgue.

The first consignment of dead mules and horses were brought out of the mine late tonight. The animals were stabled in the mine near the scene of the explosion and not one escaped death. There were 70 mules and 10 horses. The animals are being brought out in the cars which carried the dead and alive men to the surface today and are being hauled away from the Westmont entrance as rapidly as possible. They are being made into fertilizer by a local firm.

WORKERS TO HELP.

Pittsburgh District Miners Waiting for Word That Financial Aid Is Needed at Johnstown.

Leaders of the Pittsburgh miners' organization said yesterday that at a word from President Patrick Gilday, of the second bituminous district of Pennsylvania, including Johnstown, they would take up the matter of a relief fund for the sufferers of the Cambria calamity.

"It is a matter of rescue now," said Secretary William Dodds, "and too soon to make plans for financial relief, but as soon as this is taken up the Pittsburgh district will not be found wanting. While the Cambria men are not organized, the Pittsburgh district miners never fail to aid the brothers of their craft at such a time as this."

After the Port Royal mine calamity, in the Pittsburgh district last fall, a fund of $4,300 was raised for the sufferers under the leadership of the Pittsburgh district officers. Other labor organizations in Pittsburgh, notably the American Flint Glass Workers' union and the Window Glass Workers' association, stand ready to take action to raise funds for the Johnstown sufferers.

GLASS MEN GET BACK.

Pittsburghers Who Attended Cleveland Meeting Return Home. Results of Conference.

President James A. Chambers of the American Window Glass Company, Treasurer W. L. Monroe of the Federation Window Glass Company, and other Pittsburgh officials of these interests, returned yesterday after the conference of window glass producers at Cleveland, the day before, which is said to have paved the way for a new understanding on the length of the next factory fire, prices and wages.

Some of the representatives of the Federation Company remained at Cleveland to arrange matters in reference to the incompleted organization of the company. Secretary H. B. VanCleve of the Independent Glass Company is also at the Forest City while these negotiations are going on.

The general meeting of manufacturers and jobbers at Cleveland adopted a resolution that a committee of 12 manufacturers and six jobbers take up the matter of the length of the fire, wages and prices with the manufacturers who were not represented. It is said that 3,000 out of the total capacity of 3,500 pots in the country were represented.

Another resolution adopted was to the effect that the factories start October 15 and run no longer then eight months. To satisfy the outstanding contingent of the Independent Glass Company, the start may be changed to October 1. Some of the Independent Company interests have fixed on September 1 as the time to start.

Constituent concerns of the Independent Glass Company attended the meeting as follows: Camp Glass Company, Smethport, Pa.; Monongahela Window Glass Company, New Castle, Pa.; Fitzpatrick Glass Company, Falls Creek, Pa.; Dunkirk Window Glass Company, Dunkirk, Ind.; Baur Window Glass Company, Eaton, Ind., and the Globe Window Glass Company, Findlay, O.

The committee of 19 to arrange a uniform factory fire, wages and prices, is composed of the following: T. Hart Given, E. I. Phillips, William Loeffler, E. L. Flood, W. L. Monroe, J. R. Johnson, Leopold Mambourg, W. W. Miller, M. L. Case, J. S. Gery, A. F. Winner and Boyd Heck of the manufacturers, and E. W. Palmer, W. S. R. Tarkington, Capt. C. W. Brown, W. S. Kenny, J. J. Fitzpatrick and S. Bryan Kneass, representing the jobbers.

RISHER'S BOYS EVENED UP FOR THEIR DEFEAT

Took Yesterday's Game from East Liverpool by Clever Work.

BEST GAME OF THE SEASON

It Was Anybody's Contest Until the Last Man Was Out—Homestead Got Few Hits, but They Came at a Timely Moment.

Homestead evened matters yesterday with East Liverpool by winning the second of the series on the Homestead grounds. It was a pretty contest, one of the best that Steel Works park has seen this year, and it was not until the last out was made that the contest was really decided. East Liverpool had a little the best of the battles, but did not do so well placing hits. The score:

Wheeling Took Second Game.

ROCHESTER, PA., July 11.—The hard-hitting Wheeling team won the second of the series with the Rochester A. A. team this afternoon, defeating the locals by a score of 7 to 6. Burns pitched for the visitors and did nice work. Yoedt pitched the first four innings for Rochester, when 11 runs having been scored, Glassburner was substituted. Cooper, Meeghan and Mahlin of the visitors each had four hits. Tomorrow the concluding game of the series will be played, with Coleman to pitch for the locals and Mahlin or Fessler for the visitors. LOCAL GOLF CRACKS OFF FOR CHICAGO

Strong Representation from Western Pennsylvania Will Play in Amateur Championships Next Week.

This will be a rather quiet day among local golfers, many of the leading players having left yesterday for Chicago, where the national championship opens on the Lakeview course next week. The Western Pennsylvania players who have gone to Chicago are H. C. Fownes, C. B. Fownes, W. C. Fownes, Jr., and George Ormison of the Higaland Golf club; O. D. Thompson, John Moorhead, Jr., E. M. Byers and W. C. Carnegie of the Allegheny Country club, and Dr. D. P. Fredericks of Oil City. Dr. Fredericks, whom the Pittsburghers expect to make a big showing, has been down practicing over the course for a week.

W. C. FOWNES, JR.,
One of the Highland Cracks Who Will Compete at Chicago.

On the Schenley course a mixed foursome handicap medal play is scheduled for cups offered by Miss McKinley and W. S. Arbuthnot.

At Edgewood there is no scheduled event for today, but the final matches for the Fourth of July cups will likely be played between J. H. Hill and G. W. Wurzell for the first cup, and H. S. Fisher and J. F. Guffey for the second. At Sewickley the Edgeworth club will hold the handicap competition against "Bogey" for the R. D. Haworth cup, which has been twice postponed.

The Westmoreland Country club has an 18-hole handicap for a cup offered by B. C. Bakewell scheduled, while the semi-final and final match play for the governor's trophy is yet to be disposed of.

A handicap competition for the chairman's trophy is scheduled for the Pittsburgh Country club course.

HENRY W. OLIVER COMPLETES HIS BUILDING SITE

He Purchases No. 543 Smithfield Street for $100,000.

HOUSE SALE OF $72,000

Empire Land and Improvement Co. Ready for Business — Pittsburgh Dry Goods Co. Building Will Cost $250,000—Aspinwall Active.

Henry W. Oliver has purchased from Dr. Clement R. Jones the property at No. 543 Smithfield street for $100,000. The deal was made by Henry I. Adair and is somewhat of a surprise to real estate men, as it was supposed the transfer had been effected some time ago. The lot has a frontage of 20 feet on the west side of the street, adjoining the Murtland building, and a depth of 60 feet. The four-story brick block on the lot is occupied by William Radliffe & Co. as a paper store. The property was bought by Dr. Jones from Mrs. E. S. E. McKee about one year ago.

This is the second purchase in this block that Mr. Adair has made for Mr. Oliver within a year, he having negotiated the deal for the August Steinmeyer property at No. 541, which brought about $200,000. By the purchase of the Jones property Mr. Oliver gets title to the whole block from Sixth avenue to Virgin alley and practically has control of the 10-foot alley in the rear.

Nine Houses Bring $72,000.

Thomas H. Watkins has conveyed to Philip Eichenlaub nine residence properties in Black street, near Chislett street, for a sum approximating $72,000. The lots have a frontage of 30 feet each on the north side of Black street and a depth of 120 feet. The residences are nine of the houses built last year by Thuma & Keithocker, and are strictly modern in all respects. Each house contains 10 rooms, provided with baths and laundry conveniences, and all are handsomely finished. The houses are in a neighborhood where renting is easy and are considered a good investment.

Wilson J. Dow has disposed of two residence properties for $16,000. One of them was purchased by George T. Lyford for $12,000. It consists of a lot facing 40 feet on the east side of Second avenue, near Tollymet street, Twenty-third ward, and having a depth of 215 feet. The lot is improved with a handsome brick house. The other property, which was bought by George N. Powell for $4,000, has a frontage 35x90 feet in Eleanor street, near Maryland avenue, Twenty-sixth ward. It is also improved with a 10-room brick house.

The Empire Land and Improvement Company is the name of a new corporation which has received its charter and has opened offices at No. 415 Fourth avenue. The company starts with a paid up capital of $100,000 and will do a general real estate and building business. Shortly after its organization it purchased a tract of land fronting 2,000 feet in Walnut street, South McKeesport. This it has subdivided into 600 lots, which measure 25x85 and 30x85 feet in size. The boss been named "Selview park" and already has streets laid out and street improvements arranged for. The company is now building 50 frame houses of six and eight rooms each, which will be put on the market early in the Fall.

Isadore H. Aaron is president and general manager of the company. The other officers are: Hugh Murphy, treasurer; Nicholas Siebert, secretary, and M. A. Cheesbrough, vice president. Besides these officers, who will serve as a directorate, the advisory board includes Lawrence Higgins of the Green & Higgins Lumber Company, J. E. Minor, a new Brighton banker, and C. Burt, manager of the Murphy Lumber Company.

More Business, More Room.

The purchase by the Pittsburgh Dry Goods Company of the lots at Nos. 409-411 Penn avenue occasioned much comment yesterday and it was the general opinion that the price, $250,000, was a low figure when the size of the plot and the scarcity of such lots in the business section is considered. The company has been seeking such a site for months and with one exception this was the only one at all suited to its needs. The building which will be erected will cover the entire plot 80x420 feet, and will be six stories high, with foundations strong enough to carry ten stories if they are needed.

Joseph B. Shea, president of the company, said yesterday that preliminary estimates had already been made by the architects, Sutton & Russell, but that no detailed plans were ready. The building will cost at least $250,000. It will be started April 1, when the present leases expire, and will be completed by January 1, 1904. The company now has about 50,000 feet of floor space, about double the room it had in its old quarters in Wood street. The new building will have over 150,000 feet, all of which is needed now to accommodate the rapidly increasing business of the company.

Kaufmann's Addition.

The George A. Fuller Company will begin work next week on the three-story addition to the Kaufmann store building. The addition will be built on the new part and will cost about $200,000.

The First ward in Wilkinsburg is enjoying a building boom this summer that is bound to greatly add to its appearance greatly. In the Brinker plan, William Brinker is starting 30 frame houses of six rooms each, which will cost $125,000. G. H. and A. J. Bowers now have under construction 12 $5,000 brick houses which face in Brinker avenue, near Clark street. Two other brick residences, to cost $5,000 each, are being built by Henry Parker in North avenue. The houses are all to be provided with baths and most of them with furnaces and in this locality should find ready sale.

Architect J. E. Ohitz has plans for four brick veneered houses which he will build for J. M. Dietz in Cary street, near Larimer avenue, at a cost $3,200 each. The same architect is to [illegible] ords on the three-story store and flat building of Luther Morton [illegible] hton avenue, near Tioga street. [illegible] uilding will cost $15,000.

Good Market in A[illegible]all.

The Aspinwall Real Es[illegible]ompany is preparing to build six mo[illegible]ne houses in Aspinwall at a cost of $[illegible]ash. The houses will face in Wester[illegible]venue and Fifth street, where the com[illegible]y has already sold a number of good residences. They will contain eight rooms and each will be provided with baths and cabinet mantels. Of the 17 houses which this company built last year only one remains unsold and none of them are tenant.

The last three sales of the company in Aspinwall made this week are: To Anna M. Shippan of Millvale, a two-story and attic frame house on a lot 30x100 feet, on the west side of Western avenue, near Fifth street, for $4,250; to Mrs. August Meyer, a similar dwelling on a lot 25x100 feet, at No. 7 Fifth street, $3,500; for James Steele to Annie M. Ramsay, No. 316 Second street, a two-story and attic frame house, lot 25x100 feet, for $3,400; sold for John J. Fay to James J. Hastings, two lots, 25x100 feet each, in Commercial avenue, near Eastern avenue, for $3,100.

Twenty frame houses, to cost $2,500 each, are to be built by C. A. Hastings in Graddyville avenue, McKeesport.

John Wesley has awarded to J. J. Brown the contract for six frame houses of six rooms each, which he will build in Wilkinsburg township near the city line. The houses will cost $15,000.

Up the Monongahela.

Plans have been prepared and it is expected the contract will be let within a few days for the erection of a three-story brick and stone building in Penn avenue, Turtle Creek, by R. A. Boor, to be used as a business block, lodge hall and theater. The building will fill a long felt want in the Turtle Creek valley, where there are few halls of sufficient size to hold large gatherings. The estimated price of the new building is $25,000.

Two large buildings which were planned for erection this summer have been abandoned until next summer. They are those of the Monongahela Trust Company, which was to be erected at a cost of $60,000 at the corner of Eighth avenue and Ann street, Homestead, and of the Braddock Trust Company, that was to occupy a 50-foot frontage opposite Eighth street, in Braddock avenue, Braddock. The erection of the buildings has been postponed owing to the high price of building material. The Braddock building was estimated to cost $60,000 and was to be of stone and brick. Both buildings will likely be started early next spring.

New Car Barn to Be Built.

Contractor George Hall of Homestead was awarded the contract yesterday for the erection of the car barn for the Homestead and Mifflin Street Railway Company in Homestead park, Mifflin township. The building will be 40x100 feet and is to be of brick. The contract price is not given.

Sedgwick street: Joseph P. Rankin & Co. sold to Lizzie Ritchey of Sewickley to John B. Losl and Mathew Youngwith lots Nos. 133 and 134 in Sedgwick street, in the John McClung plan, for $1,800. The same brokers sold lot No. 27 in the White plan to Mrs. C. Kurtz, for $900. Both purchasers will build.

Evaline avenue: Abraham Pew sold to W. J. Fitzsimmons an improved lot 25x133 feet, on the east side of Evaline avenue, Twentieth ward, for $5,650.

Harriet street: Robert Sproul sold to Anna W. Lewis an improved lot 25x71 feet, in Harriet street, Atlantic avenue, Twentieth ward, for $7,500.

All Around the City.

Circle street: Walter Everett sold to Salvadore Pope a lot 25x100 feet, in Circle street, Twenty-first ward, for $1,300.

Kelly street: James Elmore sold to William J. Brown a lot 40x137 feet, on the north side of Kelly street, near Park avenue, Thirty-seventh ward, for $2,000.

Butler street: Christopher P. Linhart sold to Edward J. Mellish a lot 40.5x70 feet on the north side of Butler street, Eighteenth ward, for $5,000.

Negley avenue: Jacob R. Miller sold to Fred G. Schenck a lot 40x160 feet, on the west side of South Negley avenue, near Robbins street, Twenty-second ward, for $2,500.

River avenue: Israel Golab sold to Giovanni Pannola a lot 25x62 feet, in River avenue, Nineteenth ward, for $2,800.

Jones avenue: P. M. Leahy sold to Martha J. Sheeran a lot 20x75 feet, in Jones avenue, near Tower street, Twelfth ward, for $1,800.

Flowers avenue: John W. Mackney sold to W. T. Weaver a lot 28x136 feet, on the west side of Flowers avenue, near Kirkbride street, for $1,000.

Braddock: Mrs. John Escher yesterday purchased the 10-room frame residence of George Zerner, in First street, Braddock, for $4,100.

Beatty & Jones sold to C. C. Conklin an eight-room brick residence in Blackadore street, Seventeenth ward, lot 30x200 feet, for $2,500 cash.

Suburban Values Soaring.

Wilkinsburg realty values are still climbing gradually and interested persons say that the $1,000 per front foot mark will soon be reached in the neighborhood of Wood street and Penn avenue. Prices along the latter thoroughfare are soaring since the rumor that the Pennsylvania railroad passenger station is to be moved there has been revived.

Leopold Vilsack, who has begun excavating for a skyscraper office building at the corner of Ross avenue and Wood street, has offered $750 per foot for Dr. J. E. Rigg's Wood street frontage, but the offer was refused, $1,000 per front foot being the price asked.

Within a few days it is expected that plans and specifications for the new passenger station at Edgewood, to take the place of the building recently destroyed by fire, will be submitted to the railway officials. The new structure will cost approximately $8,000.

Since the grade crossing in Swissvale avenue was eliminated it is said to be the intention of the railroad company to build the new station about 100 feet west of the site of the old building, so that it will be more accessible to patrons. The report is also current that the Pennsylvania railroad station at Braddock will soon be replaced by a handsome new one and that the grade crossing there will be eliminated.

Up the Monongahela Valley.

Work was commenced by the George Hong Company yesterday on the construction of the new office building at Rankin for the McClintic-Marshall Construction Company. It is to be of brick and stone, four stories high, and will cost $50,000. The building is to be completed by December 1.

The Homestead Realty Company yesterday closed a deal for 23 lots in their Carnegie plan to a party of Homestead men, for $35,000. The lots are located in Eleventh avenue, near Andrew street, and were purchased for speculation. The purchasers are A. H. Keyser, Jr., Asbley, J. K. Stevenson, John E. Jones, Myles Ivey, D. Connon, C. A. Sweadner, William Evans, James Kuhn and George Jacobs.

Louis Weber of Homestead yesterday purchased from the Homestead Realty Company a lot in McClure street for $1,500.

The Lousinger farm of 38 acres, owned by Mrs. August Meyers of Wilmerding and located just north of Trafford City, was sold yesterday to William C. Wells of Wilkinsburg for $2,250, or at a price of $250 per acre. The farm adjoins the new industrial town and is located on the Turtle Creek branch of the Pennsylvania railroad. The purchaser represents a company which intends establishing a large brick works. The land was bought 11 years ago for $90 per acre.

Land Company to Issue Bonds.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Turtle Creek Valley and Wilmerding Land Company held yesterday it was decided to issue $80,000 worth of bonds for the improvement of the company's property.

The first step toward forming a new borough in the Turtle creek valley was taken this week when East Pittsburgh borough council passed an ordinance authorizing the erection of an overhead bridge from Cable avenue, East Pittsburgh, to Oak Hill, in North Versailles township. The new bridge will place the district of Oak Hill within easy distance of the Westinghouse works and most of the property in the section is owned by the Westinghouse Company. It is proposed to take steps in the very near future to break away from the township and organize a separate borough to be known as Oak Hill.

The following Pittsburgh building permits were issued yesterday by the bureau of building inspection: To Spear & Co., for a two-story brick veneer dwelling in Bennett street, near Homewood avenue, to cost $3,500. The Emory Methodist Episcopal church, for a one-story frame extension to the church in North Highland avenue, to cost $2,000; to the Garrison Foundry Company, for a brick power plant, in South Ninth street, to cost $8,500.

THE LATEST ADVENTURE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES.

BY SIR A. CONAN DOYLE.

(By Permission of McClure, Phillips & Co.)

I.

MR. SHERLOCK HOLMES.

MR. SHERLOCK HOLMES, who was usually very late in the mornings, save upon those not infrequent occasions when he was up all night, was seated at the breakfast table. I stood upon the hearth-rug and picked up the stick which our visitor had left behind him the night before. It was a fine, thick piece of wood, bulbous-headed, of the sort which is known as a "Penang lawyer." Just under the head was a broad silver band, nearly an inch across. "To James Mortimer, M.R.C.S., from his friends of the C.C.H.," was engraved upon it, with the date "1884." It was just such a stick as the old-fashioned family practitioner used to carry—dignified, solid and reassuring.

"Well, Watson, what do you make of it?"

Holmes was sitting with his back to me, and I had given him no sign of my occupation.

"How did you know what I was doing? I believe you have eyes in the back of your head."

"I have, at least, a well-polished silver-plated coffee pot in front of me," said he. "But, tell me, Watson, what do you make of our visitor's stick? Since we have been so unfortunate as to miss him and have no notion of his errand, this accidental souvenir becomes of importance. Let me hear you reconstruct the man by an examination of it."

"I think," said I, following as far as I could the methods of my companion, "that Dr. Mortimer is a successful elderly medical man, well-esteemed, since those who know him give him this mark of their appreciation."

"Good!" said Holmes. "Excellent."

"I think also that the probability is in favor of his being a country practitioner who does a great deal of his visiting on foot."

"Why so?"

"Because this stick, though originally a very handsome one, has been so knocked about that I can hardly imagine a town practitioner carrying it. The thick iron ferrule is worn down, so it is evident that he has done a great amount of walking with it."

"Perfectly sound!" said Holmes.

"And then again, there is the friends of the 'C.C.H.' I should guess that to be the Something Hunt, the local hunt to whose members he has possibly given some surgical assistance, and which has made him a small presentation in return."

"Really, Watson, you excel yourself," said Holmes, pushing back his chair and lighting a cigarette. "I am bound to say that in all the accounts which you have been so good as to give of my own small achievements you have habitually underrated your own abilities. It may be that you are not yourself luminous, but you are a conductor of light. Some people without possessing genius have a remarkable power of stimulating it. I confess, my dear fellow, that I am very much in your debt."

He had never said as much before, and I must admit that his words gave me keen pleasure, for I had often been piqued by his indifference to my admiration and to the attempts which I had made to give publicity to his methods. I was proud, too, to think that I had so far mastered his system as to apply it in a way which earned his approval. He now took the stick from my hands and examined it for a few minutes with his naked eyes. Then with an expression of interest he laid down his cigarette and, carrying the cane to the window, he looked over it again with a convex lens.

"Interesting, though elementary," said he, as he returned to his favorite corner of the settee. "There are certainly one or two indications upon the stick. It gives us the basis for several deductions."

"Has anything escaped me?" I asked, with some self-importance. "I trust that there is nothing of consequence which I have overlooked?"

"I am afraid, my dear Watson, that most of your conclusions were erroneous. When I said that you stimulated me I meant, to be frank, that in noting your fallacies I was occasionally guided towards the truth. Not that you are entirely wrong in this instance. The man is certainly a country practitioner. And he walks a good deal."

"Then I was right."

"To that extent."

"But that was all."

"No, no, my dear Watson, not all—by no means all. I would suggest, for example, that a presentation to a doctor is more likely to come from a hospital than from a hunt, and that when the initials 'C.C.' are placed before that hospital the words 'Charing Cross' very naturally suggest themselves."

"You may be right."

"The probability lies in that direction. And if we take this as a working hypothesis we have a fresh basis from which to start our construction of this unknown visitor."

"Well, then, supposing that 'C.C.H.' does stand for 'Charing Cross Hospital,' what further inferences may we draw?"

"Do none suggest themselves? You know my methods. Apply them!"

"I can only think of the obvious conclusion that the man has practiced in town before going to the country."

"I think that we might venture a little farther than this. Look at it in this light. On what occasion would it be most probable that such a presentation would be made? When would his friends unite to give him a pledge of their good will? Obviously at the moment when Dr. Mortimer withdrew from the service of the hospital in order to start in practice for himself. We know there has been a presentation. We believe there has been a change from a town hospital to a country practice. Is it, then, stretching our inference too far to say that the presentation [illegible] on the occasion of the change?"

"It certainly seems probable."

"Now, you will observe that he could not have been on the staff of the hospital, since only a man well-established in a London practice could hold such a position, and such a one would not drift into the country. What was he, then? If he was in the hospital and yet not on the staff he could only have been a house-surgeon or a house-physician—little more than a senior student. And he left five years ago—the date is on the stick. So your grave, middle-aged family practitioner vanishes into thin air, my dear Watson, and there emerges a young fellow under 30, amiable, unambitious, absent-minded, and the possessor of a favorite dog, which I should describe roughly as being larger than a terrier and smaller than a mastiff."

I laughed incredulously as Sherlock Holmes leaned back in his settee and blew little wavering rings of smoke up to the ceiling.

"As to the latter part, I have no means of checking you," said I, "but at least it is not difficult to find out a few particulars about the man's age and professional career." From my small medical shelf I took down the Medical Directory and turned up the name. There were several Mortimers, but only one who could be our visitor. I read his record aloud.

"Mortimer, James, M.R.C.S., 1882, Grimpen, Dartmoor, Devon. House surgeon, from 1882 to 1884, at Charing Cross hospital. Winner of the Jackson prize for Comparative Pathology, with essay entitled 'Is Disease a Reversion?' Corresponding member of the Swedish Pathological society. Author of 'Some Freaks of Atavism' (Lancet, 1882). 'Do We Progress?' (Journal of Psychology, March, 1883). Medical officer for the parishes of Grimpen, Thorsley, and High Barrow."

"No mention of that local hunt, Watson," said Holmes, with a mischievous smile, "but a country doctor, as you very astutely observed. I think that I am fairly justified in my inferences. As to the adjectives, I said, if I remember right, amiable, unambitious, and absent-minded. It is my experience that it is only an amiable man in this world who receives testimonials, only an unambitious one who abandons a London career for the country, and only an absent-minded one who leaves his stick and not his visiting card after waiting an hour in your room."

"And the dog?"

"Has been in the habit of carrying this stick behind his master. Being a heavy stick the dog has held it tightly by the middle, and the marks of his teeth are very plainly visible. The dog's jaw, as shown in the space between these marks, is too broad in my opinion for a terrier and not broad enough for a mastiff. It may have been—yes, by Jove, it is a curly-haired spaniel."

He had risen and paced the room as he spoke. Now he halted in the recess of the window. There was such a ring of conviction in his voice that I glanced up in surprise.

"My dear fellow, how can you possibly be so sure of that?"

"For the very simple reason that I see the dog himself on our very door-step, and there is the ring of its owner. Don't move, I beg you, Watson. He is a professional brother of yours, and your presence may be of assistance to me. Now is the dramatic moment of fate, Watson, when you hear a step upon the stair which is walking into your life, and you know not whether for good or ill. What does Dr. James Mortimer, the man of science, ask of Sherlock Holmes, the specialist in crime? Come in!"

The appearance of our visitor was a surprise to me, since I had expected a typical country practitioner. He was a very tall, thin man, with a long nose like a beak, which jutted out between two keen, gray eyes, set closely together and sparkling brightly from behind a pair of gold-rimmed glasses. He was clad in a professional but rather slovenly fashion, for his frock coat was dingy and his trousers frayed. Though young, his long back was already bowed, and he walked with a forward thrust of his head and a general air of peering benevolence. As he entered his eyes fell upon the stick in Holmes' hand, and he ran towards it with an exclamation of joy. "I am so very glad," said he. "I was not sure whether I had left it here or in the shipping office. I would not lose that stick for the world."

"A presentation, I see," said Holmes.

"Yes, sir."

"From Charing Cross hospital?"

"From one or two friends there on the occasion of my marriage."

"Dear, dear, that's bad!" said Holmes, shaking his head.

Dr. Mortimer blinked through his glasses in mild astonishment.

"Why was it bad?"

"Only that you have disarranged our little deductions. Your marriage, you say?"

"Yes, sir. I married, and so left the hospital, and with it all hopes of a consulting practice. It was necessary to make a home of my own."

"Come, come, we are not so far wrong after all," said Holmes. "And now, Dr. James Mortimer——"

"Mister, sir. Mister—a humble M.R.C.S."

"And a man of precise mind, evidently."

"A dabbler in science, Mr. Holmes, a picker up of shells on the shores of the great unknown ocean. I presume that it is Mr. Sherlock Holmes whom I am addressing and not——"

"No, this is my friend Dr. Watson."

"Glad to meet you, sir. I have heard your name mentioned in connection with that of your friend. You interest me very much, Mr. Holmes. I had hardly expected so dolichocephalic a skull or such well-marked supra-orbital development. Would you have any objection to my running my finger along your parietal fissure? A cast of your skull, sir, until the original is available, would be an ornament to any anthropological museum. It is not my intention to be fulsome, but I confess that I covet your skull."

Sherlock Holmes waved our strange visitor into a chair. "You are an enthusiast in your line of thought, I perceive, sir, as I am in mine," said he. "I observe from your forefinger that you make your own cigarettes. Have no hesitation in lighting one."

The man drew out paper and tobacco and twirled the one up in the other with surprising dexterity. He had long, quivering fingers as agile and restless as the antennæ of an insect.

Holmes was silent, but his little darting glances showed me the interest which he took in our curious companion.

"I presume, sir," said he at last, "that it was not merely for the purpose of examining my skull that you have done me the honor to call here last night and again today?"

"No, sir, no; though I am happy to have had the opportunity of doing that as well. I came to you, Mr. Holmes, because I recognized that I am myself an unpractical man, and because I am suddenly confronted with a most serious and extraordinary problem. Recognizing, as I do, that you are the second highest expert in Europe——"

"Indeed, sir! May I inquire who has the honor to be the first?" asked Holmes, with some asperity.

"To the man of precisely scientific mind the work of Monsieur Bertillon must always appeal strongly."

"Then had you not better consult him?"

"I said, sir, to the precisely scientific mind. But as a practical man of affairs it is acknowledged that you stand alone. I trust, sir, that I have not inadvertently——"

"Just a little," said Holmes. "I think, Dr. Mortimer, you would do wisely if without more ado you would kindly tell me plainly what the exact nature of the problem is in which you demand my assistance."

II.

THE CURSE OF THE BASKERVILLES.

"I HAVE in my pocket a manuscript," said Dr. James Mortimer.

"I observed it as you entered the room," said Holmes.

"It is an old manuscript."

"Early eighteenth century, unless it is a forgery."

"How can you say that, sir?"

"You have presented an inch or two of it to my examination all the time that you have been talking. It would be a poor expert who could not give the date of a document within a decade or so. You may possibly have read my little monograph upon the subject. I put that at 1730."

"The exact date is 1742." Dr. Mortimer drew it from his breast pocket. "This family paper was committed to my care by Sir Charles Baskerville, whose sudden and tragic death some three months ago created so much excitement in Devonshire. I may say that I was his personal friend as well as his medical attendant. He was a strong-minded man, sir, shrewd, practical, and as unimaginative as I am myself. Yet he took this document very seriously, and his mind was prepared for just such an end as did eventually overtake him."

Holmes stretched out his hand for the manuscript and flattened it upon his knee.

"You will observe, Watson, the alternative use of the long s and the short. It is one of several indications which enabled me to fix the date."

I looked over his shoulder at the yellow paper and the faded script. At the head was written: "Baskerville Hall," and below, in large, scrawling figures: "1742."

"It appears to be a statement of some sort."

"Yes, it is a statement of a certain legend which runs in the Baskerville family."

"But I understand that it is something more modern and practical upon which you wish to consult me?"

"Most modern. A most practical, pressing matter, which must be decided within 24 hours. But the manuscript is short and is intimately connected with the affair. With your permission I will read it to you."

Holmes leaned back in his chair, placed his finger-tips together, and closed his eyes, with an air of resignation. Dr. Mortimer turned the manuscript to the light and read in a high, crackling voice the following curious, old-world narrative:

Of the origin of the Hound of the Baskervilles there have been many statements, yet as I come in a direct line from Hugo Baskerville, and as I had the story from my father, who also had it from his, I have set it down with all belief that it occurred even as is here set forth. And I would have you believe, my sons, that the same Justice which punishes sin may also in Her own good time and way forgive it, and that no man is so heavy but that by prayer and repentance it may be removed. Learn then from this story not to fear the fruits of the past, but rather to be circumspect in the future, that those foul passions whereby our family has suffered so grievously may not again be loosed to our undoing.

Know then that in the time of the Great Rebellion (the history of which by the learned Lord Clarendon I most earnestly commend to your attention) this Manor of Baskerville was held by Hugo of that name, nor can it be gainsaid that he was a most wild, profane, and godless man. This, in truth, his neighbors might have pardoned, seeing that saints have never flourished in those parts, but there was in him a certain wanton and open humor which made his name a byword through the west. It chanced that this Hugo came to love (if, indeed so dark a passion may be known under so bright a name) the daughter of a yeoman who held lands near the Baskerville estate. But the young maiden, being discreet and of good repute, would ever avoid him, for she feared his evil name. So it came to pass that one autumn this Hugo, with five or six of his idle and wicked companions, stole down upon the farm and carried off the maiden, her father and brothers being from home, as he well knew. When they had brought her to the Hall the maiden was placed in an upper chamber, while Hugo and his friends sat down to a long carouse, as was their nightly custom. Now, the poor lass upstairs was like to have her wits turned at the singing and shouting and terrible oaths which came up to her from below, for they say that the words used by Hugo Baskerville, when he was in wine, were such as might blast the man who said them. At last in the stress of her fear she did that which might have daunted the bravest or most active man, for by the aid of the growth of ivy which covered (and still covers) the south wall she came down from under the eaves, and so homeward across the moor, there being three leagues betwixt the Hall and her father's farm.

It chanced that some hours later Hugo left his guests to carry food and drink—with other worse things, perchance—to his captive, and so found the cage empty and the bird escaped. Then, as it would seem, he became as one that hath a devil, for, rushing down the stairs into the dining hall, he sprang upon the great table, flagons and trenchers flying before him, and he cried aloud before all the company that he would that very night render his body and soul to the Powers of Evil if he might overtake the wench. And while the revellers stood aghast at the fury of the man, one more wicked or, it may be, more drunken than the rest, cried out that they should put the hounds upon her. Whereat Hugo ran from the house, crying to his grooms that they should saddle his mare and unkennel the pack, and giving the hounds a kerchief of the maid's, he swung them to the line, and so off they cry in the moonlight over the moor.

Now, for some space the revellers stood agape, unable to understand all that had been done in such haste. But anon their bemused wits awoke to the nature of the deed which was like to be done upon the moorlands. Everything was now in an uproar, some calling for their pistols, some for their horses, and some for another flask of wine. But at length some sense came back to their crazed minds, and the whole of them, thirteen in number, took horse and started in pursuit. The moon shone clear above them, and they rode swiftly abreast, taking that course which the maid must needs have taken if she were to reach her own home.

They had gone a mile or two when they passed one of the night shepherds upon the moorlands, and they cried to him to know if he had seen the hunt. And the man, as the story goes, was so crazed with fear that he could scarce speak, but at last he said that he had indeed seen the unhappy maiden, with the hounds upon her track. 'But I have seen more than that,' said he, 'for Hugo Baskerville passed me upon his black mare, and there ran mute behind him such a hound of hell as God forbid should ever be at my heels.' So the drunken squires cursed the shepherd and rode onwards. But soon their skins turned cold, for there came a galloping across the moon, and the black mare, dabbled with white froth, went past with trailing bridle and empty saddle. Then the revellers rode close together, for a great fear was on them, but they still followed over the moor, though each, had he been alone, would have been right glad to have turned his horse's head. Riding slowly in this fashion they came at last upon the hounds. These, though known for their valour and their breed, were whimpering in a cluster at the head of a deep dip or goyal, with the marks of their fangs upon the throat, some lying dead, and some with starting hackles and staring eyes, gazing down the narrow valley before them.

The company had come to a halt, more sober men, as you may guess, than when they started. The most of them would by no means advance, but three of them, the boldest, or it may be the most drunken, rode forward down the goyal. Now it opened out before them into a small space in which stood two great stones, still to be seen there, which were set by certain forgotten peoples in the days of old. The moon was shining bright upon the clearing, and there in the center lay the unhappy maid where she had fallen, dead of fear and of fatigue. But it was not the sight of her body, nor yet was it that of the body of Hugo Baskerville lying but it was that, standing over Hugo, and plucking at his throat, there stood a foul beast, like, yet unlike to any hound which has ever been seen upon earth. Even as they looked the thing tore the throat out of Hugo Baskerville, on which, as it turned its blazing eyes and dripping jaws upon them, the three shrieked with fear and rode for dear life, still screaming, across the moor. One, it is said, died that very night of what he had seen, and the other twain were but broken men for the rest of their days.

Such is the tale, my sons, of the coming of the hound which is said to have plagued the family so sorely ever since. If I have set it down it is because that which is clearly known hath less terror than that which is but hinted at and guessed. Nor can it be denied that many of the family have been unhappy in their deaths, which may have been sudden, violent, and mysterious. We may we shelter ourselves in the infinite goodness of Providence, which would not forever punish the innocent beyond that third or fourth generation which is threatened in Holy Writ. To that Providence, my sons, I hereby commend you, and I counsel you by way of caution to forbear from crossing the moor in those dark hours when the powers of evil are exalted.

[This from Hugo Baskerville to his sons Rodger and John, with instructions that they say nothing thereof to their sister Elizabeth.]

When Dr. Mortimer had finished reading this singular narrative he pushed his spectacles up on his forehead and stared across at Mr. Sherlock Holmes. The latter yawned and tossed the end of his cigarette into the fire.

"Well?" said he.

"Do you not find it interesting?"

"To a collector of fairy tales."

Dr. Mortimer drew a folded newspaper out of his pocket.

"Now, Mr. Holmes, we will give you something a little more recent. This is the Devon County Chronicle of May 14 of this year. It is a short account of the facts elicited at the death of Sir Charles Baskerville which occurred a few days before that date."

My friend leaned a little forward and his expression became intent. Our visitor readjusted his glasses and began:

"The recent sudden death of Sir Charles Baskerville, whose name has been mentioned as the probable Liberal candidate for Mid-Devon at the next election, has cast a gloom over the county. Though Sir Charles had resided at Baskerville Hall for a comparatively short period his amiability of character and extreme generosity had won the affection and respect of all who had been brought into contact with him. In these days of nouveaux riches it is refreshing to find a case where the scion of an old county family which has fallen upon evil days is able to make his own fortune and to bring it back with him to restore the fallen grandeur of his line. Sir Charles, as is well known, made large sums of money in South African speculation. More wise than those who go on until the wheel turns against them, he realized his gains and returned to England with them. It is only two years since he took up his residence at Baskerville Hall, and it is common talk how large were those schemes of reconstruction and improvement which have been interrupted by his death. Being himself childless, it was his openly expressed desire that the whole countryside should, within his own lifetime, profit by his good fortune, and many will have personal reasons for bewailing his untimely end. His generous donations to local and county charities have been frequently chronicled in these columns.

"The circumstances connected with the death of Sir Charles cannot be said to have been entirely cleared up by the inquest, but at least enough has been done to dispose of those rumors to which local superstition has given rise. There is no reason whatever to suspect foul play, or to imagine that death could be from any but natural causes. Sir Charles was a widower, and a man who may be said to have been in some ways of an eccentric habit of mind. In spite of his considerable wealth he was simple in his personal tastes, and his indoor servants at Baskerville Hall consisted of a married couple named Barrymore, the husband acting as butler and the wife as housekeeper. Their evidence, corroborated by that of several friends, tends to show that Sir Charles' health had for some time been impaired, and points especially to some affection of the heart, manifesting itself in changes of color, breathlessness, and acute attacks of nervous depression. Dr. James Mortimer, the friend and medical attendant of the deceased, has given evidence to the same effect.

"The facts of the case are simple. Sir Charles Baskerville was in the habit every night before going to bed of walking down the famous Yew alley of Baskerville hall. The evidence of the Barrymores shows that this had been his custom. On the 4th of May Sir Charles had declared his intention of starting next day for London, and had ordered Barrymore to prepare his luggage. That night he went out as usual for his nocturnal walk, in the course of which he was in the habit of smoking a cigar. He never returned. At 12 o'clock Barrymore, finding the hall door still open, became alarmed, and, lighting a lantern, went in search of his master. The day had been wet, and Sir Charles' footmarks were easily traced down the alley. Half-way down this walk there is a gate which leads out on to the moor. There were indications that Sir Charles had stood for some little time here. He then proceeded down the alley, and it was at the far end of it that his body was discovered. One fact which has not been explained is the statement of Barrymore that his master's footprints altered their character from the time that he passed the moor gate, and that he appeared from thence onward to have been walking upon his toes. One Murphy, a gypsy horse dealer, was on the moor at no great distance at the time, but he appears by his own confession to have been the worse for drink. He declares that he heard cries, but is unable to state from what direction they came. No signs of violence were to be discovered upon Sir Charles' person, and though the doctor's evidence pointed to an almost incredible facial distortion—so great that Dr. Mortimer refused at first to believe that it was indeed his friend and patient who lay before him—it was explained that that is a symptom which is not unusual in cases of dyspnœa and death from cardiac exhaustion. This explanation was borne out by the post-mortem examination, which showed long-standing organic disease, and the coroner's jury returned a verdict in accordance with the medical evidence. It is well that this is so, for it is obviously of the utmost importance that Sir Charles' heir should settle at the hall and continue the good work which has been so sadly interrupted. Had the prosaic finding of the coroner not finally put an end to the romantic stories which have been whispered in connection with the affair, it might have been difficult to find a tenant for Baskerville hall. It is understood that the next-of-kin is Mr. Henry Baskerville, if he be still alive, the son of Sir Charles Baskerville's younger brother. The young man when last heard of was in America, and inquiries are being instituted with a view to informing him of his good fortune."

Dr. Mortimer refolded his paper and replaced it in his pocket.

"Those are the public facts, Mr. Holmes, in connection with the death of Sir Charles Baskerville."

GREAT PROGRAM OF SERVICES AT PARKS TOMORROW

Splendid Music and Eminent Divines Will Be Heard at Every Resort.

RELIGION IN THE OPEN AIR

Arrangements Perfected for Sunday Are Unique and Promise a Religious Festival Such as Pittsburgh Has Never Known Before.

The greatest Sunday religious programs ever arranged for the Pittsburgh parks, as a whole, have been prepared for tomorrow. At the four traction resorts, Calhoun, Kennywood, Southern and Oakwood parks, and at the city parks, Highland and Schenley in Pittsburgh, and west, in Allegheny, the people will have a chance to hear some of the best concert bands and orchestras in the country, some of the best choruses and some of the most prominent divines of the state.

It is one big religious program for all the pleasure grounds, embracing representatives of all the religious faiths as well as sacred compositions of the greatest composers. To perfect these plans the Rev. S. Edward Young and the management of the Pittsburgh Railways Company have worked for some time, the latter lending all the bands and orchestras, with their soloists, now under contract with them, for the instrumental part of the musical program.

Great Musical Program.

At Kennywood park Phinney's United States band will play afternoon and evening, which insures good music. Here the Rev. Dr. D. F. McGill and the Rev. A. H. Kaylor will deliver addresses in the afternoon and the vocal music will be under the direction of Prof. Mark C. Baker. "Onward, Christian Soldier," "America," a cornet duet, "Kindred Souls," by J. W. Merrill and C. Johnson; Wagner's "Pilgrim's Chorus!" solo, "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go," by Prof. Baker; the popular hymn, "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus," and finally a paraphrase of the hymn "Nearer, My God, to Thee," by the band are some of the musical numbers on the program.

The evening service, at 7:30 o'clock, will be led by the Rev. W. A. Stanton, D. D., the choir being under the leadership of Benjamin F. Butts. Handel's "Largo," a cornet solo, "The Palms," by J. W. Merrill; "Lead, Kindly Light," "I Love to Tell the Story," baritone solo by Benjamin F. Butts, "My Name in Mother's Prayer;" a xylophone solo by C. Fisher, and the well-known hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," by the band and congregation, will be some of the musical numbers. Although very large audiences are expected, the pavilions, with their ample space, will furnish plenty of protection should bad weather tend to mar the services.

Catholics Have a Part.

The Very Rev. E. A. Bush, D. D., vicar general of the Roman Catholic diocese of Pittsburgh, also pastor of St. Peter's pro-cathedral, Allegheny, will lead the afternoon services, which begin at 3 sharp at Calhoun park. He will have with him St. Paul's Cathedral choir, under the leadership of Prof. Joseph Otten, while the Robert Pitcairn band will assist. Major Hendershot, the original drummer boy of the Rappahannock, will also be there, giving two selections on his famous silver-mounted drum. The evening services, at 7:30, will be led by the Rev. J. W. Sykes, D. D., the choir being conducted by L. T. Phillips. The Robert Pitcairn band will again take care of the instrumental part of the musical program. Mozart, Gounod and Haydn compositions will be prominent among the numbers played and sung.

Southern park will have the Rev. John H. Prugh, D. D., who will be there in the afternoon at 3 o'clock, and Benjamin F. Butts and chorus, under the direction of A. B. Morton, together with the Helen May Butler Ladies' Military band, will furnish the music.

In the evening the Southern park services begin at 7:30 o'clock, and will be led by Rabbi J. Leonard Levy, D. D., the singing being conducted by Luther Harper. The Ladies' band will appear again in the evening.

At the Other Parks.

At Oakwood the Rev. E. L. Eaton, D. D., will address the people, while Butts and his chorus and the Chicago Newsies' band will furnish the musical part of the program. In the evening the Rev. Alonzo J. Turkle, D. D., and the Rev. A. H. Kaylor, D. D., will lead the services, the Newsies band also appearing. The singing will be under the direction of T. F. Smith.

The Rev. W. J. Russell will be at Highland park in the afternoon, the vocal music being directed by Mr. Muir. Rocereto's band will give some excellent selections in addition to the hymns that are to be played.

At Schenley the Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young will deliver an address in the evening, and he will have with him Prof. Brown and chorus. Rocereto's band will play at Schenley also.

The Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young will be at West park, Allegheny, in the afternoon at 4 o'clock. The singing will be under the direction of A. H. Busby, and the Homestead Library band will furnish the instrumental music.

The church services announced for tomorrow are as follows:

CANADIAN LAWYERS WROTH AT MR. ERWIN

Charge that He Offered to Let Gaynor and Greene Go Free for $500,000—He Denies It.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS TO THE GAZETTE.]

QUEBEC, July 11.—During the proceedings in the Gaynor-Greene case today Mr. Taschereau strongly protested against the remarks made by Mr. Erwin respecting the judiciary in this province and considered it an act of effrontery. He regretted his absence, as he had something interesting to tell him. He was quite surprised, he said, that in his report Mr. Erwin had not informed the United States authorities that he had made an offer to the prisoners to drop the case if the latter would pay over $500,000 to the United States government.

Counsel for the accused asked for a delay to Tuesday next on the habeas corpus case to reply. This was granted.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 11.—Marion Erwin, the special assistant to the attorney general in the prosecution of the charges against Gaynor and Greene, today made the following statement:

"There is nothing in the statement from Quebec that I offered to settle the case for $500,000 except this: When the prisoners were taken to Montreal Benjamin D. Greene, in a conversation with me which he requested, stated that he and John F. Gaynor would be willing to pay the government $500,000 in settlement of the whole controversy. I replied that the sum stated was not sufficiently large for me to mention it to the attorney general."

Modern Marriage Problems

is the title of an article prepared especially for next Sunday's Gazette by Elizabeth Cady Stanton. It is one of many very interesting specials which the Sunday Gazette will contain.

You no doubt have observed that the Sunday Gazette is improving every week. Despite the fact that it began its career with the determination to surpass any other paper ever published in Pittsburgh, it is becoming more interesting with each succeeding issue. If you wish the best, the Gazette is the only paper that will appeal to you.

DEMOCRATS WILL GO ALONG ON THE CONGRESS END

Committee to Be Named by Brennen Will Indorse Citizens Candidates.

MAY BE BALK ON DALZELL

Sixth Legislative District Democrats Demand Representation on the Legislative Ticket or They Won't Play--Senator Quay in Town Again

Chairman W. J. Brennen is expected to select the committee of three, authorized by the Democratic county convention to decide on congressional candidates, some time next week. It is well known that at least one of the congressional candidates on the Citizens ticket will refuse to make the fight should a three-cornered race take place, and accordingly the Democratic leaders are almost of one mind as to the best policy of the party in naming congressional candidates. The result will be the indorsement of the congressional candidates named by the Citizens party.

One of the controlling spirits in the Democratic convention, who is almost certain to be named as one of the committee of three to be appointed by Brennen expressed himself plainly yesterday when he said that it would be hard to find three real Democrats who could be induced to select candidates in opposition to those named by the Citizens party.

Don't Want to Injure Fusion Ticket.

"It looks to me," he said, "as though H. Kirke Porter, George Shiras III. and James W. Brown will surely be named. I am not quite certain about John Dalzell, but it would be folly to injure the ticket by trying to name a Democrat in that congressional district, with Mr. Dalzell on both the Republican and Citizens tickets. He will be elected, and we might as well go along.

"Judging from the sentiment among the leaders, all four will be indorsed and no Democrats placed in the field this trip. You see, if we elect the Citizens and Democratic county tickets the Democratic party gets a portion of the glory and is in better position, with the prestige of battle won, to name its own candidates for congress and all other positions at the next election.

"If we divide up the ticket and place congressional candidates in the field the organization Republican candidates have a better show of winning, and while we will have to elect Republicans in the Citizens candidates, it is better for us not to endanger our portion on the county ticket, when we would have no chance of electing Democratic congressional candidates should they be put in the field."

Headquarters Deserted Yesterday.

One of the Democratic candidates on the county ticket takes the same view, and stated emphatically that he would rather see Mr. Shiras indorsed, even though he be a strong Republican, than have a place on the ticket himself. He says he intends to use his influence to bring about this result and knows that the sentiment among the party leaders is all one way, with reference to Allegheny especially.

The headquarters of all three parties looked like deserted villages yesterday, with a sort of mutual regard for the feelings of citizens who have troubles of their own the leaders are resting for the present, so that when the hot months have passed they can take up the fall campaign with renewed vigor and carry on a rousing campaign.

The Democratic committee of the Sixth legislative district empowered to fill vacancies is not satisfied with the legislative fusion ticket. The committee met yesterday in F. P. Iams' office, and after a session lasting two hours and a half, decided that the Democrats of the district must have representation. The fusion ticket contains the names of U. M. Beck and Mr. Heath, the latter of Mifflin township. Both are Republicans. The committee was appointed by the legislative district. It consists of Dr. John Berman chairman and M. C. O'Donovan and Franklin P. Iams. The following is the resolution they adopted:

Sixth District Democrats Resolve.

"As the Democracy of the Sixth legislative district usually casts about one-fifth of the Democratic vote of the whole county, and about one-third of the whole vote, both Democratic and Republican, in the Sixth legislative district, and has been conceded no place upon the county or congressional tickets named by the joint committee of Citizens and Democrats, it is the sense of this committee that it is no more than fair and just that the Democracy of the Sixth district should be allowed representation on its own legislative ticket, and this committee therefore demands such representation, pledging themselves that if one place on the district ticket be conceded to the Democracy, it will, in turn, indorse such other representative candidate as the Citizens' committee may name; and, to this end, this committee stands ready to meet such other committee on the part of the Citizens' party as may be designated, looking to the amicable adjustment of the whole matter."

This resolution will be certified to the Citizens' party's executive committee of 32, and it is expected that it will appoint a committee to confer with the committee from the Sixth legislative district.

The following are some of the Democrats from the district who are willing to run for the legislature: J. G. Silvens, attorney; George Churchill, trolley car conductor; D. M. Keys of Crafton, and Casper Mayer, a Bridgeville merchant.

Senator Quay Here Again Yesterday.

Senator M. S. Quay stopped off in Pittsburgh yesterday on his way home from his conference with Gov. Stone, Attorney General John P. Elkin and other state politicians. The senator said he and Senator Penrose went to see Stone merely for a social visit. The senator said he asked Elkin to take the stump for the state ticket, and that Elkin had said he would.

The senator was at the Hotel Duquesne until about 2 p. m., when he returned to Beaver, whence he will leave on next Monday for a trip to the Maine woods. George M. von Bonnhorst called on the senator and was in the room with him most of the time. The Republican county chairman, A. C. Robertson, also called and talked with him for 15 minutes. Mr. Robertson said the senator had not much to say.

BIG ORDERS FOR STEEL.

American Firm Is Capturing Contracts for Huge Buildings in South Africa.

JOHANNESBURG, TRANSVAAL, July 11.—The British trade commissioners who recently arrived here from England admit that they are amazed at the amount which is offering, and comment on the indolence of the British firms.

They say that so far as they are able to discover, only one firm, and that an American concern, has a capable representative in South Africa, and he has been securing immense orders in Cape Town and at Johannesburg, at his own prices, for huge buildings up to 14 stories, it being able to quote prices promptly and promise construction with American speed.

BAD FIRE ON THE TOP FLOORS OF ALLEY BUILDING

Employes Reach Safety by Stairs and Fire Escape in the Rear.

BUILDING WAS FLOODED

No Member of the Firm Could Be Reached Last Night and Loss Was Roughly Estimated at $20,000 on Stock and $5,000 on the Building.

Just what caused the flash of fire on the top floor of the six-story building, No. 510 Strawberry alley, last night, may never be known, but there was a flash, and all the employes in the building ran for their lives to the fire-escape in the rear and to the stairways in the front. Before the firemen came all were out in safety.

The alarm was sounded at 9:29, and almost before the gongs in the engine houses had stopped clanging, a second alarm was sent out. There was any number of people who were the "first" to discover the fire. All agree that it was on the top floor, but when the firemen arrived the fire was fiercest on the fourth floor. It had come down the elevator shaft, which was about half-way back in the building, and set the fourth and fifth floors on fire.

The building was occupied by the Dawes Manufacturing Company, makers of glass signs. On the top floor were a number of enameling ovens, where the paints are burned into the glass. It was about these ovens where the fire originated. Because of the great weight of the ovens, and also of the tons of water thrown on the upper floors, the fire chiefs hesitated about putting men on the inside. The building is of the slow-burning variety, and was erected six years ago.

Because of the grade of Strawberry alley the firemen had considerable difficulty in getting ladders in place at the front, where the first attack was made. Men were then placed on the fire escape in the rear with two streams, and then half a dozen streams were worked from the buildings facing Grant street and running back to the alley between these buildings and the one on fire. Then it became simply a question of the supremacy of the water over the fire.

The Dawes Manufacturing Company, of which John L. Dawes is president, make fancy glass signs, druggists' bottle labels and the like, and occupied the entire building, which is about 40 feet front in Strawberry alley, running back 80 feet to a narrow private alley off Dante alley. Not a member of the company could be located last night. Mr. Dawes went east Thursday night.

The loss to the building, which is owned by Charles Donnelly, is not over $5,000, if it is that, and is covered by insurance. The floors were not burned through, only a portion of the roof is gone, and the walls are not damaged. The loss of the Dawes Manufacturing Company is hard to estimate, but will hardly exceed $20,000. There is no fire loss below the fourth floor, but the water loss is great. The firemen worked nearly three hours before it was considered safe to leave the building.

USED BANK FUNDS.

Teller Brinker of German National Bank Took $4,000—Full Restitution Has Been Made.

Henry H. Brinker, teller in the German National bank, a trusted employe for 16 years, was on Monday discovered to have appropriated about $4,000 of bank funds. He admitted his guilt to Cashier W. W. Ramsey and agreed to make full restitution, which has since been done.

Cashier Ramsey said yesterday: "It was a great surprise to all of us, as Brinker was the last man in the world we would have suspected of such a thing. He has a young wife and his domestic relations are the happiest. A very careful audit of his accounts makes the shortage $4,000, which he has made good with more than ample cash and bonds in which he had invested. He is under bond for $15,000, given by the Monumental Trust Company, also, but his bondsmen have not been called upon, nor will any prosecution be made.

"All reports about the shortage having been $17,000 are without foundation. Brinker, I find, has been juggling accounts for some time, but he tells me that he took this $4,000 in one lump, to invest in some bonds, and that it was through the failure of friends to make good their promises that he became involved."

Brinker's method of peculation was to enter the amount deposited in a depositor's pass book, but hold out the money without making any entry in the bank book. Cashier Ramsey says that Brinker retained all the original deposit slips and that these check up with the audit made by the other clerks so that the $4,000 shortage is verified.

National Bank Examiner Hugh Young said he had been informed by the bank officials that Brinker had made full settlement and that an examination of the books and cash would disclose no shortage whatever. He also declared that Brinker's books had been audited by him three months ago and that they were correct to a cent.

Brinker is about 35 years old and lives at No. 2609 Wylie avenue.

RELIGION DROVE A WOMAN INSANE

ROSE CARR OF SWISSVALE ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

While Parents Were Preparing to Take Her to a Hospital, Prominent Young Woman Escaped and Threw Herself in Front of Car.

Rose Carr, 22 years old, daughter of a prominent Swissvale family, attempted to throw herself under the wheels of a moving traction car, in front of the residence of Thomas Morrison, superintendent of the Edgar Thomson mills, in Jones avenue, North Braddock, while temporarily insane over religion, at noon yesterday.

The girl secured a transfer from a Swissvale car at Jones avenue, and when a Braddock car approached, with a wild scream she threw herself on the tracks in front of the car.

Theh motorman succeeded in stopping the car before reaching her. Several men picked her up and, after considerable difficulty, placed her in a cell in the North Braddock lock-up.

Dr. Charles Clifford was called and found the girl to be mentally unbalanced over religion. She was taken to St. Francis' hospital. Miss Carr has been an active church worker, but recently showed signs of becoming unbalanced on religious matters.

Her parents had arranged to take her to a hospital yesterday, when she escaped from her home and boarded a street car.

BORROWING OF MONEY BY THE CITY STOPPED

Controller Larkin Puts Foot Down on Practice That Has Caused Much Embarrassment.

The city of Pittsburgh will not borrow any more money to fill out appropriations. When the actual amount of money to the credit of a certain appropriation is exhausted, that is to be the end of it. The same is true of contracts. Controller John B. Larkin has notified City Recorder J. O. Brown to that effect.

The practice which has prevailed for years, in this regard, is being discontinued. The controller does not believe that the city ought to borrow money so recklessly. The controller believes that the city pays too much interest, and that there is no warrant in law for it.

It was the practice of the city government for years to borrow money to fill out appropriations. The system was to spend every cent appropriated to a certain bureau of expense, no matter whether the money was actually to be found there or whether it was short.

In short, the controller would authorize a warrant and countersign it, and the city treasurer would then go out and borrow the money. Consequently when the appropriation for the next year was made, there was a deficit to make up, a debt to pay, as well as provision to be made for interest on the borrowed money. This system was partly responsible for many of the financial straits in which the city government has found itself at times.

"There will not be any more borrowing of money in order to piece out appropriations," said Controller Larkin yesterday. "That practice has been carried on entirely too long, and I do not propose to allow it as long as I am controller. It is a reprehensible practice to say the least. I am not a lawyer, yet I believe that there is no warrant in law for any such proceeding, and I am absolutely certain that the new charter expressly forbids it.

"The practice heretofore has been something like this: For instance, we will say the bureau of health is given an appropriation of $100,000 for the ensuing year. The actual amount of money from taxes and revenues paid into the appropriation, we will say, is only $60,000, as sometimes happens. Now when this amount of money, $60,000, is exhausted, it has been the practice to go to the bank, and borrow the difference, $40,000.

"Hereafter, when the $60,000 is exhausted, that settles the issuance of warrants on this appropriation. Only the actual amount of money will be expended. When that is gone it is all over, until money is either transferred or councils makes a new appropriation and provides the money for it. The same is true of contracts. The city has borrowed money at times to pay the balance due on contracts. There will not be any more of that."

Will Hold Conferences Today.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 11.—Mutual concessions by the freight handlers and the railroads have paved the way for conferences which may lead to the settlement of the freight handlers' strike. These conferences, which will be the result of the work of the Chicago board of arbitration, will be held tomorrow morning in the offices of the respective general managers.

NINE THOUSAND TROOPS IN CAMP AT GETTYSBURG

National Guardsmen Greet United States Artillery and Cavalry.

OVATION FOR THE TENTH

Heroes of Manila Loudly Cheered by Citizens of the Town—Soldiers Compel Reduction of Trolley Line Rates—Guard Appointments.

By ROBERT WRAY,
Staff Correspondent.

Camp George A. Meade, Gettysburg, Pa., July 11.—Yellow stubble fields are now covered with white canvas and the grounds over which Pickett charged are tonight occupied by 9,000 sleeping guardsmen, whose sires drove the tide of rebellion back into the last stronghold of the confederacy.

Before the dawn troop trains rolled into the camp. Throughout the morning various organizations marched to the tented field and at the close of day the entire division was in bivouac. In the early morning a battery of the Fourth United States artillery broke into view from a cloud of yellow dust. Just in the rear of the artillerymen came two squadrons of Second United States cavalry on prancing steeds. Among the cavalry were many old and grizzled veterans of the civil war who in 1863 had ridden from Virginia with Kilpatrick's troopers over the same roads where today they received the hearty plaudits of hundreds of admiring comrades of the guard.

Cheers for the Tenth.

An ovation was given to the First battalion of the Tenth regiment when it arrived this morning. All Gettysburg was in the street and flags were waved from windows and doorways, while on every hand loud hurrahs were given for the heroes of Manila. A pretty incident occurred when the Tenth men in khaki met the Fourteenth at the intersection of two thoroughfares. The Pittsburgh regiment had the right of way, but the moment the Tenth's battalion came in sight Col. Thompson halted his command and gave a marching salute as the Tenth passed.

Camp was officially opened at sunrise. There was no ceremony. The camp is pleasantly situated and sufficiently far enough from the town to make the guardsmen hesitate in walking to and from it. From Gettysburg the soldier has to cover two miles if he is a member of the Second brigade, and almost four miles if he does not belong to the command. Trolley cars, horses and wagons have been pressed into use by officers, but soldiers must foot it after a day of guard duty.

Brought Car Company to Time.

The Gettysburg Traction Company, which runs a line of cars to the camp, increased its rates since the arrival of the Guard. The Traction company's cars cover a long length of the battle field and their rate has always been a nickel. Shortly after the troops arrived the rate was increased to 10 cents and threats were made today by the soldiers to derail the cars if the old rate was not given to them. As a result orders were at once issued by the officials and the boys are now riding on a 5-cent fare.

The arrangements for the annual inspection were made today. A drill of regular army officers arrived in camp and will accompany the brigade inspectors. They will be assigned with each brigade inspector and their work will embrace all arms of the service. A peculiar feature of the assignment is that these officers embrace the artillery arm of the service. While it is not known yet, it is thought that these reports will go to the military information bureau of the war department and will not be published.

Appointments in Guard.

HARRISBURG, PA., July 11.—General orders were issued from the headquarters of the National Guard of Pennsylvania today announcing the following appointments to the medical department:

First lieutenant, John W. Coffin of Beaver county, surgeon of the Tenth regiment; Edwin H. Lowe of Westmoreland county, assistant surgeon of the Tenth regiment, and Franklin F. Arndt of Lackawanna county, assistant surgeon of the Thirteenth regiment.

The following officers have been relieved from duty upon their own application and placed upon the retired list: Maj. George W. Neff, surgeon Tenth regiment. Capt. Joseph L. Hunter, chaplain Tenth regiment; Capt. Anthony F. Machold, Company G, Third regiment, and Lieut. Col. Thomas M. Maginnes of Philadelphia.

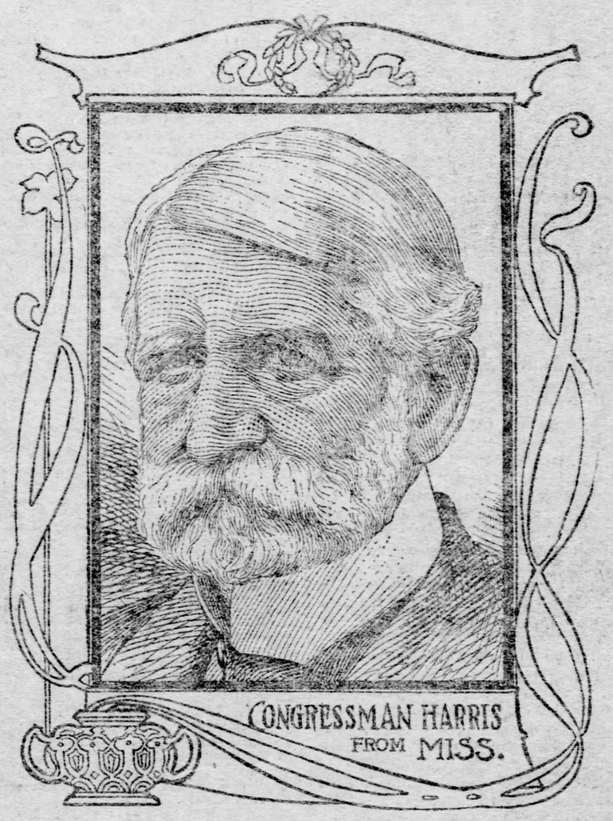
"I AM FULLY AWARE

Of the Excellent Curative Qualities of Peruna."

[Says Congressman Geo. E. Harris From Mississippi.]



Hon. Geo. E. Harris, of Mississippi, Lawyer and Author of several law books, was member of 41st and 42nd Congresses, after which he was elected Attorney-General of the State of Mississippi. This prominent gentleman writes from 1247 9th St., N. W., Washington, D. C., as follows:

"I take pleasure in recommending your Peruna to anyone suffering with catarrh. I am fully aware of its excellent curative qualities."—GEO. E. HARRIS."

A STRAIGHT COURSE

Pointed Out to Those Who Have Catarrh in Any Form.

You have chronic catarrh, have you? You have had it some time? And could not find a cure? Well, there are thousands more like you in this country. If the slightest vestige of the catarrh remains over during the hot weather it will begin to make itself felt now. If you really want to get cured this is the way to do it.

Get a bottle of Peruna and take a tablespoonful between each meal and at bedtime. When you have continued this for thirty days sit down and write a letter to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O. Tell him exactly your symptoms; how long you have had catarrh; what effect the medicine has had on you. He will answer your letter promptly, telling you what to do further. He will make no charge. And if you will continue to write to the doctor you are sure to get cured. Some cases take longer than others. Perhaps the average length of time it takes to cure a genuine case of catarrh is three months. Some get cured much quicker than this. Stubborn cases may require longer treatment. Time or trouble ought to be no barrier to one afflicted with this dreadful disease.

All people who are interested in knowing about catarrh can get an instructively illustrated 64-page book on chronic catarrh in all stages and location, free of charge.

J. R. Allen, Lock Box 30, Florence, S. C., writes:

"Last fall I went to my physician for treatment. He told me that my nervous system was run down, and gave me some medicine. I received no relief, and it began to look as if I was not going to get well. I saw Peruna advertised to be good for nervous prostration (systemic catarrh), and bought six bottles. I am fifty years old, and am now heavier than I ever was in my life—gaining 12 pounds from the use of Peruna."

J. R. ALLEN.

Mr. T. M. Pletcher, Cincinnati, Ohio, writes:

"I am traveling for the Regina Music Box Co., of No. 11 East 22nd St., N. Y. I have had catarrh of the head for the past five years until there was hardly a day passed that I didn't have a headache. I tried a great many blood and catarrh medicines without any visible results, until after hearing about Peruna, I decided to give it a trial. I commenced to use it about four months ago. I now have a fine appetite, and the pains in my head have entirely left me. I certainly have been greatly benefited by Peruna."

T. M. PLETCHER.

Mrs. Nancy L. Stewart, Admiral, Texas, writes:

"I would like to tell you what Peruna has done for me. I had catarrh of the nose, head and throat, and could hardly swallow or get my breath for two months. I tried every medicine available, but could secure no relief. I commenced to take Peruna, and it was like a charm. It not only cured me completely, but I am stouter than I have been for many years.

"Every one says I look twenty years younger. I do not hesitate to recommend Peruna to my friends."

R·I·PANS

I had been troubled for ten years with indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, oppression and sour stomach caused by irregular eating, and have suffered severely and painfully, many times being seriously ill. The symptons have been nervousness, dullness, hot flushes, headache, sleeplessness, rumblings in the stomach, and sometimes severe internal pains and constipation. Ripans Tabules were first brought to my attention by my sons, who have used the Tabules for general debility and indigestion. The beneficial operation of the Tabules was noticed about six days after commencing their use, the headache and biliousness first disappearing, and then gradually the other trouble.

The Cambria Horror.

With every resource employed in the work of immediate rescue of the entombed miners in the Rolling Mill mines at Cambria there has as yet been little opportunity or thought for the investigation into the causes of the terrible catastrophe that wrought such distress and death in the Johnstown and Cambria mining settlements. A number of rumors as to what brought about the frightful explosion of firedamp in the fatal mine have gotten into circulation, but until they can be verified by actual investigation their reliability remains unsettled. One of the most succinct and probable stories of the cause of the disaster is that which declares it to have been the result of using unprotected candles on the part of some of the miners engaged in work along the shafts where the explosion occurred. These men are said to have been at work withdrawing the supports in the worked-out rooms so as to allow the abandoned rooms to fill up by caving in, and thus prevent the accumulation of gas. The work is regarded as hazardous even under ordinary circumstances, but with naked candles, as it is alleged the men were working, the risk and danger are greatly intensified.

If it be possible to arrive at a just estimate of the causes of the accident no means should be left untried to discover them. A mine disaster left unexplained adds fresh mystery and difficulty to an industry already hedged about with a record of grewsome disasters. To locate the cause is also a new weapon of defense against like calamities in the future. In the meantime public sympathy has been deeply stirred by the shocking fatality that has plunged a whole community into grief and suffering. Most of the men who lost their lives were foreigners with large families dependent upon them for support. Among these there is sure to be much suffering, and it is a gratifying evidence of the quick and generous spirit of modern helpfulness to find that relief measures have already been inaugurated and will no doubt be sustained as long as there may be need for them.

End of the Window Glass War.

No proclamation of peace has been promulgated by the window glass manufacturers, but the belief is general that at least a protocol was agreed upon at the Cleveland meeting. There has been cruel war in the window glass trade for a long time, but now the warriors appear to have settled their differences. They have got together, at least near enough to approach within sight of harmony which promises more stable conditions in the business. Three thousand pots were represented in the peace negotiations, out of a total of 3,800, and efforts will be made to bring the remaining 800 pots into harmonious relations with the pots already harmonized. The results promised are cooperation as to the time of starting fires, an understanding as to prices and the elimination of possible labor disputes.

Holding On to Their Passes.

There is distress and lamentation abroad in the Old Dominion. A clause in the recently adopted constitution of that state forbids the use of railroad passes by officials in the employ of the city, county or state in any capacity whatsoever. A recent legal opinion expands this prohibition to men on state boards or commissioners, and indicates that the receipt of a salary from the public treasury, however small, or the possession of an honorary position, however insignificant, is sufficient to prevent the holders thereof from honestly using a railroad or steamboat pass. Indeed, the Virginia state constitution in its present shape is said to be one of the severest blows ever dealt the free pass system among state and municipal officials.

The sequel of this Virginia tragedy, however, promises to be even more interesting than the present disturbance over the discovery. There is a general and wholesale exodus from honorary and non-remunerative positions in the Old Dominion, and the appointing powers will soon be busy filling the places of the patriotic sons of the mother of states, who, when faced with the terrible alternative of holding places of honor or riding on a free pass, with almost unanimous action chose the pass.

Constitutions have a habit sometimes of becoming boomerangs.

The Business Situation.

The statistics coming to hand this week covering business operations for the last half year furnish the opportunity for some interesting comparisons and deductions. They are a remarkable testimony to the expansion of domestic trade, and to its maintenance beyond the most sanguine expectations. Thus the receipts of grain at Chicago over all railroads for the six months amounted to 61,500,000 bushels, compared with 120,500,000 bushels for the first half of 1901, a decrease of nearly 50 per cent. But during the same period the gross and net earnings of all these grain-carriers were larger than ever before. The deduction is that the traffic of the roads has become more diversified and has increased in sufficient volume to more than offset the enormous loss in grain shipments, which was due to the partial failure of the corn crop last year.

Of a similar character are the figures relating to iron production, and necessarily of the coal and coke output. The weekly capacity of pig iron furnaces in blast on the 1st inst. was 352,590 tons, a total never before equaled in the history of the country. This is an increase of more than 50,000 tons a week compared with the output last February. When a slight increase in furnace stocks occurred last December, followed by a decrease in production during the early part of this year, there was a general disposition to regard the showing as proof that the great industry had passed floodtide, and that a slow but steady decline to a normal level was certain. But in May a wonderful increase occurred, and now July breaks all records. Unsold furnace stocks now amount to only 75,000 tons, compared with 392,000 tons a year ago and more than 1,000,000 tons five years ago.

The foreign trade statement has shown a steady falling off in exports, mainly of breadstuffs, and it is therefore most encouraging to have the evidence of improvement in domestic trade. The increase in the latter is responsible for a very active money market, the movement of currency to the west during the week having been on a large scale. As a result, Wall street is looking forward to higher rates for call and time loans, but if these should be quoted earlier than usual, it is well to know that the underlying cause is legitimate demand, and not overspeculation or lack of confidence. There was a notable contraction of loans in foreign money markets this week. The Bank of England reported a decrease of $49,500,000, the Bank of France a decrease of $27,500,000 and the Imperial Bank of Germany a decrease of nearly $14,000,000, a total by these three institutions of about $91,000,000 in one week. The contraction follows an unusually heavy expansion during the weeks immediately preceding, indicating an active money market abroad as well as at home.

During the past week general trade conditions have remained favorable, but the labor situation continues unsatisfactory. No steps have yet been taken to bring about a speedy resumption of anthracite coal mining, and in some other branches of business additional strikes have been inaugurated. Today is the anniversary of the declaration of the iron and steel strike last year, which proved a disturbing factor in the business situation for two months. The coming week will be interesting as deciding the attitude of the bituminous coal miners on the question of a sympathy strike with the workers in the anthracite field. The general impression is that the soft-coal miners of this state, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois will not break the contracts which they have with the operators, but the general public will feel easier when the joint convention places itself on record to that effect.

The government crop report indicates a decrease in the yield of wheat, compared with last year, but a very fair average crop. The increased acreage of corn and the present average condition indicate the largest crop ever harvested. The same promise is held out as to oats. The effect upon business sentiment has been distinctly favorable.

Panama Canal Control.

As the United States is to build an expensive canal to connect the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, it is imperative that this government secure control of the land along its course and the ports at each end. The representatives of this country and of Colombia are now hard at work upon the treaty, trying to get that instrument into a shape acceptable to both governments. Colombia is inclined to be sensitive upon the question of jurisdiction, fearing that the control which the United States must exercise in order to keep the canal navigable will in some way be inimical to its sovereignty. This republic has not the slightest intention of increasing its territory at Colombia's expense, nor of interfering in any way with Colombia's sovereign rights. In practice it might at times be difficult to mark the line between control and sovereignty, but if Colombia wishes the great waterway to be cut through her territory she will have to cede perpetual control of the strip of land through which the canal will flow and the ports at its terminal. The waterway will be to the east importance to the world's commerce and to the United States to permit of doubt upon this point.

The President's Vacation.

Apart from the good-natured comments upon the president's elaborate plans to hedge himself about as far as possible in the privacy of his country retreat at Oyster Bay, there is a real and serious reason why he should be allowed to extract all the comfort and rest out of his brief vacation that is possible. Few people stop to remember that along with the remarkable development and progress of the nation the office of chief executive has come to be a post demanding the most arduous personal labor and self-application. The work of the presidential office has increased to such an extent in recent years that only a man of vigorous physical powers can hope long to withstand its exactions and keep his health unimpaired. It will be remembered that one of the significant results of the diagnosis of President McKinley's condition after he was stricken down at Buffalo was the discovery that though seemingly in robust health he was really the victim of great physical weakness as a consequence of his continued application to the hard work of his office.

President Roosevelt is a far more vigorous and active man than was the late president, but this very fact may prove a temptation to him to overtax his energies. Now that he has sought seclusion in his Oyster Bay home from the vexations and exactions of his Washington office he should be allowed to get all the good possible out of his rest and be left undisturbed by those people who may have only their personal interests or curiosity to serve, as against the importance of the president's vacation opportunities.

American Push in South Africa.

British captains of industry appear to be slow to take advantage of peace in South Africa. The close of the war has been marked by a strong impetus to business, and the most of the foreign trade should naturally go to Great Britain. Perhaps the English manufacturers think it will go there anyhow, whether they seek it or not, but if this is their thought they are likely to be disappointed. The government is looking into the situation, however, even if the business men are dilatory. It has sent trade commissioners to spy out the land. These commissioners have got as far as Johannesburg. They are amazed at the amount of business offering and mildly surprised at the indolence of British firms. They have been able to discover only one capable representative in South Africa. Of course, this enterprising man represents an American concern. He has been and still is busy taking orders for fourteen-story steel buildings and such trifles at his own prices, because he is able to give figures and to close contracts on the spot, and promise construction within a short time. There is evidently opportunity for a great deal of American vim in South Africa.

A Notable Exploit.

To comprehensively and intelligently place before the public full and accurate accounts of a great disaster like the mine horror at Cambria immediately following the accident, and at the same time by accurate photographic reproduction to present pictures of actual happenings and scenes in connection with the occurrence is a journalistic feat not easily nor always successfully accomplished. On this score The Gazette has reason to feel proud of the story of the Cambria fatality which it has given the public, and which has, both yesterday and today, excelled in features included in no other accounts that have been published.

A Texas gentleman challenged Gen. Eagan of Spanish war fame to fight a duel, cans of crabapined beef to be the weapons. This was a wholly unjustifiable instance of rubbing it in.

A Rousing Partnership.

From the New York Sun.

More great news from Wichita, glorious even in Kansas as a fountain of new things. Now the Hon. Carrie Nation is not exactly a new thing and has been seen and heard, by those who couldn't help it, even in these parts. But she has thrown that all away, sparing the rumtree for a season, and has become an agent or bagwoman of the wizard of Zion, the Hon. John Alexander Dowie, otherwise known as "Elijah II." This is the greatest alliance of wind and sound that has been made since the time described in the nursery rhyme, when

"The Megaphone bestrid the College Yell,
The Siren ran off with the Telephone Bell,
And the Foghorn thundered 'Hiram's this beat Tarkeo!'"

The legs of Hist and Carr ought to do a rousing business.

NIGHTHAWKS MARK LIMITS OF GAIETY

The Localities They Haunt Are Homes of Revelry—Shifting Northward.

THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE BUREAU,
Herald Building, Herald Square,
NEW YORK, July 11.

Among the many indications that the center of Manhattan life is moving steadily up-town is the fact that there are lines of waiting cabs in districts far above Longacre square, where a few years ago no cabman would have thought of looking for casual fares. Where the cabs are there is life and gaiety. This rule, which applies to Pittsburgh and every other large city, is particularly noticeable in New York. Around Herald square there is always a group of cabs, with their drivers either sitting idly on the box or standing about the sidewalk with a weather eye out for fares. These cabmen probably will haunt this quarter for many a long year. A little further down, at Greeley square, there are fewer cabmen than used to be there. This particular spot in New York is called, for some unexplained reason, "the graveyard." Here cabmen have plied their calling for more than a decade, and usually it has been so lively there about midnight and in small hours, that most likely the term "graveyard" is applied to it in a spirit of irony, as expressing the very opposite of its true character. Nowadays there seems to be some likelihood of its becoming as dull as a graveyard in the course of time, so far as cabs are concerned. For "nighthawk" cabmen are essentially men of business and aim to be where there is most demand for their services. They find that along a certain stretch of Columbus avenue, which is becoming known as "the new tenderloin," they can pick up a great many fares, and that these "fares" are usually men who do not mind giving a driver a tip of a dollar, even after paying him 50 per cent more than the legal rate for the use of his cab. There are several swell restaurants in this locality, including one known to the initiated as the "up-town Delmonico's," although that is not the name of its gilded sign. Time was when this part of Columbus avenue was seriously respectable, and the only sounds of revelry to be heard were from some decorous musicale or euchre party in the flats on the cross-streets; but it has been steadily getting more saucy from year to year, until now it demands a "nighthawk" cab service of its own, with all that that implies.

Millinery Openings for Horses.

There was a millinery opening of an unusual character in New York this morning. Hats and sunbonnets were given away—not in the sense in which such things are "given away" by enterprising merchants in bargain sales, but actually presented to the wearers of them, free of charge. The recipients of the newest things in pink-ribboned Panamas and saucy sunbonnets were the raddyed horses who have been suffering under the heat of the sun for most of the week. President Haines of the S. P. C. A., with a group of assistants, oversaw the giving out of the hats and bonnets, and any driver was welcome to one or as many as he needed for his horse or horses. More than 2,000 hats were given away in two hours, and there will be another distribution of a thousand or two on Monday at the same place, outside the society's building in Madison square. The hats are rakish-looking affairs when perched on the ears of a truck horse or mule. Weighing less than three ounces each, they have a crown six inches high and seven inches in diameter, while the rim is five inches wide. The hats cost the society 10 and 12 cents apiece by the quantity.

Electric Fan for a Dime.

An excellent model of an electric fan, which can be held in the hand and worked by a moderate pressure on a spring, is one of the new things offered for sale by curbstone merchants. They cost 10 cents apiece, and when you hold one a foot or two from your face the wind is strong enough to blow your hat off. They do much better work than ordinary palm leaf and are not so laborious to work. It must be admitted that they are somewhat more clumsy than the old-fashioned fan, suggesting a traveling tin shop rather than the implement of flirtation and coolness combined to which we have been accustomed under the name of fan.

A Pittsburgher in the Scheme.

It is said that the company that Bridge Commissioner Lindenthal declared yesterday was ready to erect a continuous moving platform on the Brooklyn bridge if permission is granted, includes at least one Pittsburgher. The purpose is to form a company incorporated under the laws of New York state to operate and manage the franchise. The parent concern has headquarters in Chicago.

Belated Fourth of July Fatality.

The deadly aftermath of the Fourth of July is as appalling in this city as anywhere. William Kruger, 36 years old, died of lockjaw today as the result of a cannon cracker exploding in his hand on Independence Day.

Monument to a French Hero.

A number of New Yorkers went to Newport this morning to witness the ceremonies in connection with the laying of the cornerstone of a monument to Admiral de Ternay, the only French soldier of note who died in this country during the Revolutionary war. Admiral de Ternay, who commanded the fleet that carried Rochambeau and his 6,000 French soldiers to this country, lies buried in the little cemetery of Trinity church, Newport. The spot itself is marked with an unpretentious slab, the original tablet having been placed in the church itself for protection from the weather. The Cercle Litteraire Franco-American of New York decided some months ago to start a subscription for a monument not only of de Ternay but of the landing of the French troops at Newport. Today was the anniversary of that event.

Cheap Restaurants on a Huge Scale.

Some idea of what an immense business is done in this city in cheap restaurants may be gathered from the fact that a company was incorporated at Albany today with a capital of $4,000,000. The purpose of the company is to operate restaurants. While some of the places will be outside of this city, most of them will be in Greater New York. The company already has a score of restaurants in full operation and will add to their number. One can purchase everything on the bill of fare for about $3, most of the dishes, even with meats extraordinarily high, as they are at present, not exceeding 15 or 20 cents. It is well said that one can pay less or more for a meal in New York than in any other city in America, according to the state of your finances and your knowledge of the town.

Stirring Up Ellis Island.

It looks as if there has been considerable corruption in the management of some of the departments at Ellis island. One official, the chief of the registry division, has been laid off for a fortnight while an investigation of his official conduct is made, and Commissioner Williams will stir up other departments as he gets around to them. He has made many changes in the system of caring for immigrants in the short time that he has been in charge. Foreigners coming to New York in the big steamships are easy prey for unscrupulous men, and it is declared that many strangers have been victimized in various ways. The commissioner has his suspicions, and it happens that he has authority enough to investigate until he finds that he was mistaken or otherwise. Immigrants have a much better time when they reach New York then they had even only a decade ago, but there is still room for improvement.

One More Park Opened.

A new park was thrown open to the public in New York this morning. It is in "Little Italy," at the foot of East One Hundred and Twelfth street, overlooking the East river, and is to be known as "Thomas Jefferson park." At a given signal two little girls, one of American and the other of Italian parentage, hauled a flag to the summit of a pole and the gates flew open. There had been a crowd of bare-legged youngsters and their mothers waiting for an hour, and as soon as they got in they swarmed over the place like an army of ants. This park is one of a dozen such playgrounds planned during the administration of the late Mayor Strong.

Roses by Any Old Name.

When the board of aldermen, in Mayor Strong's time, decided to establish a number of small parks in different parts of Manhattan, to reinforce those already existing, that august body thought it would be a good idea to name the parks for distinguished men who had helped to make American history. This intention, however, was not carried out to the letter. For instance, the William H. Seward park at Canal street and East Broadway is too often called out of its name. It is the "Sewer park," to most of those who frequent it. The Hamilton Fish park at Willard and Stanton streets has lost its dignified title and is abbreviated into the "Ham Fish park." The De Witt Clinton park, at Fifty-third street and the North river, is known as the "Hudson Bank park" to the surrounding populace. And frivolous titles take the place of dignified names in several of the others. The main point, however, is that the children get the parks, and little care the urchins what the playgrounds are called.

Dewey's Men Have Privileges.

The "man that fought with Dewey in Manila bay" turned up this morning. As is too often the case, he turned up in a police court. He was drunk last night and the police gathered him in. As soon as he was brought face to face with Magistrate Cornell he proclaimed that he had been on the Raleigh during the battle which ended in glorious victory, and looked as if that ought to procure his discharge. It did, too. The magistrate only waited to verify the story of the prisoner, and when it was found that he knew all about the battle in detail, and could describe its scene geographically he was a free man. If only you fought with Dewey, New York is wide open for you. The magistrates of this metropolis do not forget.

Uncle Sam a Prompt Shipbuilder.

Work will begin at once on the new battleship that is to be built at the Brooklyn navy yard. The first order in connection with it has been issued from the yards and docks department. The first operations will be on the ways, which are to be the berth of the ship. The work of digging and of driving piles is provided for, so that as soon as the construction department is ready they will begin work. It may be started next week. Naval Constructor Capps was in Washington today, consulting with Admiral Bowles concerning the plans for the work and for the ship.

The Dixie's Future.

There was a hearty welcome at the Brooklyn navy yard today for the training ship Dixie, which has just returned from the relief expedition to Martinique. She reached Tompkinsville, Staten island, yesterday. Now that she is at the navy yard, she will go out of commission and will be fitted up as a hospital ship for the use of the squadrons during the fall and winter maneuvers. It is expected that she will be ready for the cruise in two or three months' time. The Dixie's crew will be transferred to the Panther, which also arrived at the yard today. The crew are mostly apprentices who are taking their first lesson in seamanship.

End of a Hoodoo in Sight.

Even the death of the contractor, Maj. Ira Shaler, has not lifted the ban from what has come to be known as the "hoodoo section," as the rapid transit subway is called. It extends from Thirty-fourth to Forty-second streets under Park avenue. Besides the accident to Maj. Shaler, there was the Murray hill explosion, the burning of the armory, with the fatalities at the Park Avenue hotel, and several minor disasters. Today a great boulder dropped into the excavation at Forty-first street and injured two men, besides scaring a dozen others almost to death. This particular part of the subway is nearing completion, happily, and everybody connected with it is thankful for it.

The Air to Be Photographed.

The commissioner of street cleaning of New York is an enterprising official. He wishes the city kept in a good sanitary condition, so far as he has anything to do with it, and he considers that before reform can be carried out one must know what the evils are. Therefore, he is making preparations to "photograph" the air. The process is thus described: Gelatine plates one foot square have been exposed in different sections of the city at heights varying from one to six feet and allowed to remain exposed, so that the plate may accumulate the particles and germs in the air, which are so small that the eye cannot even discern them. After they have been exposed for a sufficient time, each plate is carefully marked and taken to the Cornell university laboratory, where it is subjected to a microscopic examination. If germs are discerned, they are cultivated according to the well-known bacteriological methods, and when they have attained maturity are photographed. The resulting plate, when developed, shows unmistakably the condition of the air in the particular portion of the city in which the original gelatine plate was exposed.

HEIR TO THRONE QUITS THE ARMY

Belgian Royal Quarrel—Irish Sympathize With King Edward in Illness.

By the MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

Prince Philip of Belgium, county of Flanders, only brother and next heir to King Leopold, has severed his connection with the Belgian army, in which he held the rank of general and chief commander of the cavalry. His action, which has created a great sensation, not merely in Belgium itself, but likewise at all the courts of Europe, is the result of his pronounced disapproval of the action of the government in connection with several recent appointments, notably that of Gen. Brieoux, and as the king preferred to part with his brother rather than incur all the trouble and turmoil involved by a fight with his cabinet, he accepted the count's resignation.

The relations between the brothers have never been cordial, although until now appearances have been maintained. The ill-feeling started during the lifetime of the late king, who never made it any secret that he preferred his younger son to his first born. Indeed his relations with the latter were, especially toward the last, very strained, and at his death he bequeathed to the count of Flanders and to his daughter, the now demented Empress Charlotte, almost the whole of his vast private fortune, to the exclusion of Leopold. Then, too, the count has always been a man of pronounced domestic virtues, whose married life, wholly free from scandal of any kind, has served to bring into still greater prominence the moral shortcomings of the king.

The intercourse between the king, his brother, is certain now to become more strained than ever before, and the count of Flanders cannot but strongly resent the attitude of the king, who, by failing to back him up in his differences with the cabinet, has forced him to not only resign his command of the cavalry, but likewise to sever his connection with the army. It is without precedent in the history of monarchical Europe for the heir to a throne to take such an extreme step as this.

Irish Sympathy for the King.

One of the most noteworthy features of popular sentiment in connection with the recent illness of King Edward has been the sympathy shown for him by the Nationalist press throughout Ireland, showing that the Irish Nationalists declined to hold the sovereign responsible for the acts of his Unionist ministers. One of the most vigorous exponents of Irish Nationalism and chief organ of the anti-English press in Ireland, namely the Dublin Evening Telegraph, calls attention to the fact that King Edward has never shown personal hostility toward National demands, and then goes on to say "the distinction between loyalty to a government and a generous and warm-hearted feeling for the sufferings of one who the Irish have more than a suspicion is, so far as the king can influence affairs, a friend of this country, may be too subtle for the dull-witted English jingoes. But in this country (Ireland) it means a great deal. If the coronation were to be celebrated tomorrow there would be as little likelihood or our people taking part in it as before. But that does not prevent us from hoping that King Edward may still survive to reap the fullness of his honors and enjoy the loyal affections of his own people, even if the character of the government carried on here in his name may preclude during his time deeper feeling than sympathy on our part."

No Place for Viceroy.

Incidentally I may point out that whereas the lord high chancellor of Ireland was to have a leading place in the coronation procession at Westminister abbey, the viceroy of the Emerald Isle had no place assigned to him as such. Indeed, Lord Cadogan would have merely figured among the earls in the abbey.

The reason for this apparent anomaly is that viceroy of Ireland is supposed to be always in Ireland, and that from the very moment when he leaves Ireland he, ipse facto, divests himself of his vice-regal office, which passes into the hands of the lords justices, who are sworn in as governors general of Ireland by means of one of those blood-curdling oaths of mediaeval tinge so offensive to Roman Catholics as to prevent any Catholic member either of the supreme court or of the Irish privy council from accepting office as one of the lords justices.

An Amusing Illustration.

This loss by the lord lieutenant of Ireland, of his vice regal dignity and honors from the very moment that he sets foot in England, was amusingly illustrated on one occasion when Lord Crewe, while viceroy of Ireland, found himself a fellow passenger with the duchess of Devonshire on the trip from Kingston to Holyhead. Lord Crewe was seated in a reserved portion of the deck between the two paddle boxes, when he caught sight of the duchess, and with a condescending wave of the hand signed to her that she might take the vacant chair beside him.

The duchess, who had known him since he was a little boy, remembered that while in Irish waters and even as long as he trod the decks of the Irish mail steamer he remained viceroy and was entitled as such to royal honors. Indeed, she was quite as deferential to him throughout the trip across, and it was only when they reached Holyhead and were going down the gang plank of the steamer together that she suddenly exclaimed in a very sharp and peremptory tone, as if she were talking to a lad of no consequence:

"And now, Bobbie, just take hold of this bag and run on as fast as you can ahead and see that I have a compartment reserved for me like a good boy."

Cultured Archbishop of Servia.

Archbishop Firmilian, the new primate of Servia and principal ecclesiastical dignitary of that kingdom, is no stranger to this country, for he lived here a number of years, during a portion of which time he figured as pastor of an important church at Chicago. He is quite a remarkable man in his way. Educated at Belgrade and Athens, he took holy orders, but, unable to accommodate himself to the existing ecclesiastical conditions of Servia, he resigned his cure of souls and migrated to Prague, where he went through a course of philosophy at the university, supporting himself by working as a mason during the day. Having graduated, he returned to Servia. But after filling for a time the chair of professor of divinity at Belgrade, the political and ecclesiastical conditions once more led him to quit his native land, and this time he came to America. He is a remarkably enlightened and accomplished man, is likely to prove a wise counselor to King Alexander, and is intellectually, as well as morally, head and shoulders above most other dignitaries of the so-called orthodox church.

Ancient Medical Bulletins.

We have been hearing a great deal of late about "bulletins" in connection with the health of King Edward and Queen Wilhelmina. The word has been in use for purpose of medicine for about 150 years. The first occasion that it was employed was in connection with the illness of the French Dauphin, father of King Louis XVI, in 1765. Of him Walpole wrote in one of his letters:

"Every morning the physicians frame an account of him, and happy those who can produce a copy of this lie called a 'bulletin.'"

Obituary Notes.

Mrs. Annie Herzog, 23 years old, wife of Leo Herzog, died at her home, No. 217 Hazel avenue, Braddock, yesterday afternoon of stomach trouble.

Mrs. Mary M. Goff, 86 years old, widow of Alexander L. Goff, a former resident of Pittsburgh, died last night at 9:15 o'clock at her home in Butler, Pa.

Emil C. Ehrmann, 39 years old, is dead at his home, No. 2314 Sarah street, South Side. He had one of the largest private collections of insects in this section. His parents, two brothers and three sisters survive.

The remains of Jason H. Hoffstot, the well-known merchandise broker, will be taken to East Liverpool, O., today for interment. Mr. Hoffstot's death occurred Thursday at the home of his daughter in Bellevue. He was 69 years old.

Mrs. Jane Tophan, an aged resident of North Braddock, died suddenly at the home of her sister, Mrs. E. F. Wallace, in Corey avenue, North Braddock, late Thursday night. She recently returned from California, where her husband died several years ago.

Mrs. Mary Murray, 80 years old, widow of John Murray, an old-time river captain, is dead at her home, No. 42 South Seventeenth street, where she had lived for the past 50 years. She was a charter member of St. John the Evangelist Roman Catholic church, South Side. Four children survive.

PERSONALS.

W. A. Dinker has resigned as general purchasing agent of the Pittsburgh Coal Company and will shortly accompany Mrs. Dinker on an extended trip abroad. Stress of other business interests led to Mr. Dinker's retiring from the coal company, with which he has been prominently connected since its organization. His assistant, Walter Malone, is now acting purchasing agent, the appointment of Mr. Dinker's successor not having been made.

The Rev. Dr. W. E. Schenck, for over 30 years secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Publication at Philadelphia, has come to this city to live with his son, S. T. Schenck, commercial agent of the Reading and the New Jersey Central railroads. Mr. Schenck's home is on Fourth street, Verona. Dr. Schenck is now 85 years of age and is confined to his home by reason of the infirmities of age.

Henry C. Payne, postmaster general of the United States, and Mrs. Payne were passengers last evening on the Pennsylvania limited en route from Washington to their home in Milwaukee. Mr. Payne asked for the latest information in regard to the Johnstown mine disaster, and said that the extent of it had shocked the world. Mr. Payne said that official Washington, and the cabinet in particular, was pleased with the reception of President Roosevelt in this city on July 4. The manner in which the affair had been conducted and the enthusiasm shown were creditable to the people of the city. "We were not surprised at it, however, for we had come to judge Pittsburgh by Mr. Knox, its representative in the cabinet, and we expected the city to show its full appreciation of the president." Mr. Payne said he expected to spend 10 days in Milwaukee and then return to Washington. He admitted that the present trip is made for the purpose of fixing up his political fences.

One of the passengers east over the Baltimore & Ohio last evening was R. H. Connelly, a grain broker of Milwaukee. Mr. Connelly spoke with more freedom about the Wisconsin fight. "It is the old fight of the stalwart, or machine faction, against the reform or insurgent element," he said. "The points at issue are taxation and primary election reform. The stalwarts are led by Postmaster General Payne and Senator John C. Spooner, while the reform faction is led by Gov. Robert LaFollette. The primaries for the state and congressional elections will be held Wednesday. In preparation for three of the hottest fights in the history of the state is on. It has reached the point of street fights in Milwaukee."

George McNaughten, superintendent of the Brooks plant of the American Locomotive Company at Dunkirk, N. Y., is at the Duquesne. The Pittsburgh locomotive works belong to the same company. His trip here is on business connected with his work.

Charles T. Montgomery, station master at the Union station, left yesterday on his vacation, which he will spend at Spring Lake, Canada.

President Joseph E. Schwab of the American Steel Founders' association and party reached Pittsburgh about midnight last night over the Fort Wayne. All of yesterday was spent at Alliance, O., where they inspected the plant of the American Steel Casting Company and the car shops of the Alliance Machine Company, which are to be taken into the foundry association.

ATLANTIC CITY.

Legal Contest for Estate of Col. McKay Expected and Coroner Holds an Inquest.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 11.—(Special.)—The ordering of an inquest into the death of Col. Nathaniel McKay of Washington, who expired suddenly at a hotel yesterday, aroused much speculation when the announcement was made today. Later it developed that the investigation was solely for the purpose of establishing the facts of previous sickness and that he had been receiving thorough medical attention. The inquest began at 7:30 o'clock tonight and was conducted by Coroner Stephant.

Mrs. McKay testified that Col. McKay was in poor health when they were married and that on their arrival here physicians were called in. These physicians were Drs. Philip Marvin and Joseph C. Marshal. Both testified that they had attended Col. McKay for the two weeks preceding his death, and that in their opinion death was caused by heart disease. Five of the maids employed in the house were called to prove that not only were physicians in attendance, but that their orders regarding the patient had been carried out. The proprietor of the hotel was called and he corroborated the testimony of the physicians and the maids.

Death Was Natural.

The body will be forwarded to Washington tomorrow and placed in a receiving vault, and eventually will be sent to Boston for interment. The jury returned a verdict of death from natural causes.

The inquest was ordered at the request of the colonel's young bride, who wishes to avoid any legal complications from the suddenness of his death. Mrs. McKay consulted with Dr. Philip Marvin, who called in County Physician Souder this morning and asked him to order the inquiry to be made, at the same time stating the reasons, and the order was at once given.

When the newly-married couple arrived here on July 1 Col. McKay seemed to be in the best of health, but within a few days his health failed and for several days before his death he was unable to leave his room for any length of time. The wife was assiduous in her attentions to the sick man, and is greatly distressed by the shock of his death.

Legal Battle Promised.

There promises to be a lively contest for the estate of the dead man. Those who know McKay say he left a fortune of $500,000. His second wife, from whom he was divorced, lives at No. 327 McDonough street, Brooklyn. A Mrs. Smith, who says she is a relative of Mrs. McKay No. 2, says the latter will contest any claim for McKay's estate made by his third wife, and that she has placed the matter in the hands of her attorney, Gen. Tracy. The trouble between McKay and his second wife began about four years ago. McKay's last marriage, Mrs. Smith said, was very sudden. McKay went to Baltimore and Miss Grier went there about the same time. They took a boat on Chesapeake bay and found the girl's brother and sister on board. A storm came up and the party landed and went to a hotel at Chrisfield. A messenger was sent for the girl's uncle, the Rev. G. W. W. Wynne, who obtained a license and married them.

The Dewey house, which McKay built in Washington in 1898, has been profitable. He also owned two fine residences in Washington. He met the present Mrs. McKay when the Dewey hotel was building. She lived across the street from the hotel. A workman was hurt and was carried into her house. Col. McKay went across to see how the man was getting on and met Miss Grier. He fell in love with her, and after he obtained his Oklahoma divorce, married her.

FLOWER Day was observed at all the summer playgrounds yesterday. The attendance at several was larger than ever recorded on any previous occasion, the Third ward school playgrounds in Allegheny heading the list with over 600 children present. The children were wild with delight when they saw the flowers which had been prepared in small bouquets to be distributed when the youngsters went home at noon. Flowers were contributed for the playgrounds by Pittsburgh and Allegheny florists, by the women of Sewickley, who provided great basketsful of wild flowers, and other field and garden flowers were given by people throughout the East End and residence portions of the two cities who have been interested in the work in the playgrounds.

Mrs. Reuben Head acted as chairman of the committee in charge of the Third ward, Allegheny, playgrounds yesterday, in the absence of her mother, Mrs. Howard Morton. When the hour of dismissal arrived the children formed in line, and as they left the grounds, the girls saying good-by and the boys taking off their caps, each one received a bunch of flowers.

Daisies were distributed to the children at the Birmingham school playground yesterday. Mrs. Samuel Miller and her children and a number of friends spent a portion of Thursday afternoon picking the flowers, which were tied in small bouquets. The masses of daisies which filled every available receptacle during the morning hours were a beautiful sight. A pleasing coincidence was the selection of the daisy for the subject for talk during the nature study half hour. There were plenty of flowers for the 250 children in attendance, each one receiving a large cluster.

Some system is required to keep all of the children occupied and out of mischief during the morning. At 9 o'clock they all assemble in the school building and give the salute to the flag, a very interesting drill, followed by the singing of "America." The kindergarten children are then permitted to go to the boxes filled with sand, where they play for a half hour, while the older children are given a little talk on some form of nature. When the half hour is over the girls and boys scatter to the various forms of special work which they are taking up, the Sloyd work, basketry, sewing and nature work. A short time is given to singing, and at 11:50 the kindergarten children are dismissed, the older children going home at 12 o'clock.

Yesterday was also Library Day at the Birmingham school, when books were distributed to the children. The supplying of the summer playgrounds with books was begun by the Carnegie library, as an experiment, four years ago. During the first summer five playgrounds were supplied, the total circulation being 1,600 books. The second year books were distributed at seven playgrounds, with a circulation of 1,833. Last year nine playgrounds had a circulation of 3,637 books, and this year it is expected to have books distributed at nearly all of the playgrounds. The books issued are not all fiction, but include stories of travel, and in many cases biography and books on natural history. Statistics proved that last year the per cent of fiction issued was reduced from 60 of the year before to 52 last summer.

Wagner-Rowand.

The wedding of Miss Sarah W. Wagner and William H. Rowand last Wednesday evening in Verona surprised their friends in Pittsburgh. The young people were visiting Arch. H. Rowand of Verona and on Wednesday evening, accompanied by Miss Jeannette Rowand, went to the home of the Rev. Jesse Penney Martin, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of that place and calling him out from the prayer meeting, which he was conducting, were married. They returned to the Rowand residence, where they told of their marriage. Their engagement was announced some time ago and it was thought the wedding would take place in December. Mr. and Mrs. Rowand will go in a few days to Denver, where they will spend their honeymoon.

Gathering in the Money.

Mrs. Samuel Miller has issued notices for a meeting of the Winodausis club next Tuesday at the Monongahela house, when the returns from the picnic and euchre at Kennywood park this week will be made. The entertainment was much more successful than the ladies anticipated. One hundred ladies were provided for euchre at the Casino, 800 people were in attendance at supper and in the evening the dancing pavilion was filled with club members and their friends, the exclusive use of the building having been reserved for the club. The ladies are considering the possibility of giving another similar entertainment during the summer season.

Interesting Double Wedding.

A double wedding will take place at Freeport next Tuesday morning in St. Mary's Roman Catholic church. Gertrude and Lawrence Brombach, sister and brother, and Catherine and Frank L. Costello will marry Gertrude Brombach Costello's cousins, both of Freeport. Frank Costello will mary Gertrude Brombach and Catherine Costello will be united in marriage with Lawrence Brombach. The four young people are very well known and quite popular at Freeport. The ceremonies will be performed by the Rev. Father Bennett of St. Mary's church.

Shuck-Foust.

The Rev. F. Foust of the Whitaker Free Methodist church and Miss Buelah M. Shuck of Glenwood were married on Thursday at noon at the residence of the Rev. C. W. Stamp, district elder of the Free Methodist church, who performed the marriage ceremony. The bride has taught successfully in the Hazelwood public schools for several years and was re-elected for the coming school year. Mr. and Mrs. Foust will spend their honeymoon with Mr. Foust's mother in Bolivar, Pa.

Hook-Carothers.

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Mary Hook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hook, Jr., of Buena Vista street, Allegheny, and Charles R. Carothers took place on Thursday evening. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William E. Schramm, pastor of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church of Allegheny. After the wedding supper Mr. and Mrs. Carothers started on a western trip.

Bishop-McKelvey.

A quiet wedding took place Wednesday evening, July 9, at the residence of the Rev. Thomas Leak, the officiating clergyman, Fernes street, Oakland. The bride was Miss Adelva A. Bishop, daughter of Dr. S. B. Bishop of St. Clair street, East End, and the bridegroom was John A. McKelvey, Jr., of the city assessors' office. After a wedding trip east Mr. and Mrs. McKelvey will live in the East End.

Entertained for a Bride.

Miss Annie Stevenson of Monterey street, Allegheny, entertained at cards Thursday afternoon in honor of Miss Emma L. Fickes of Steubenville, Ohio, and Mrs. W. Lawrence Kalmeyer, a recent bride. The game was euchre and prizes were won by Mrs. Kalmeyer, Miss Fickes, Miss Yetta Kiedle and Miss Rachel DeHaven. Mrs. Kalmeyer was formerly Miss Edra M. Gerwig.

Entertaining a Visitor.

Mrs. Reuben Head gives a small and informal theater party this afternoon at the Duquesne garden in honor of Miss Edith Lawrence, Mrs. John Fremont Shafer's sister, who is visiting her. Miss Lawrence was also the guest of honor at a pretty informal luncheon yesterday afternoon.

Social Notes.

Miss Sara M. Hebank of Franklin avenue, Wilkinsburg, left this week for a three months' tour of Europe.

Mrs. Charles Kiser and children of Coal street, Wilkinsburg, have gone to Lake Chautauqua, where they have taken a cottage for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Cochrane and their two daughters, on Thursday evening entertained a number of their friends at their home in Maple avenue, Allegheny.

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Miss Cora Belle Duncan and M. L. Brown of Morgantown, W. Va., which is to take place at the residence of the bride's aunt, Mrs. T. M. Thompson, Bellevue, July 17, at 4 o'clock. The ceremony is to be performed by the Rev. Dr. B. F. Woodburn of the Sandusky Street Baptist church, Allegheny.

EDUCATORS CLOSE ANNUAL MEETING

Convention Most Successful in History of Association—Federation of Teachers Elects Officers.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS TO THE GAZETTE.]

MINNEAPOLIS, July 11.—The great educational convention of 1902 has come to an end and it has proved the most successful ever held.

Forty-five meetings of the departments and six general sessions contributed to the work. Most of the delegates will depart at once to their homes, but a thousand or more will stay in Minnesota and vicinity for some time to visit various places of interest. It seems to be generally understood that the meeting place for next year will be Boston.

The National Federation of Teachers was organized this morning, with the following officers: President, Margaret Haley, Chicago; first vice president, Miss K. Maud Clum, St. Paul; second vice president, Miss Mary McGowan, Cincinnati; secretary, Miss Arnette Rosenthal, Milwaukee; treasurer, Miss Emma McCabe, New York.

DIED FROM HEAT.

Two Men Who Were Prostrated Early in the Week Succumbed Yesterday.

Although the torrid weather has passed and cool and delightful weather is now prevailing in this section, the effect of the hot wave of the early part of the week has not passed away yet. Two more deaths, which are traced directly to their heat, occurred yesterday morning.

The first was that of Ernest Kock, Sr., 71 years old, who died at his home, Arlington avenue and Cologne street, South Side, after several days of suffering from prostration.

The other death was that of Charles Gilchrist, 40 years old, of No. 1140 Walnut street, McKeesport. Mr. Gilchrist was employed by the McKeesport Ice Company and on Wednesday was prostrated while at work.

The cool weather is about over, according to the forecast of the weather man. For today and tomorrow he predicts fair and warmer conditions, and it is probable that there will be another big day at all the parks tomorrow.

Yesterday's maximum temperature in Pittsburgh was 76 degrees, the mercury remaining at this point for about three hours yesterday afternoon. The minimum was 56 and occurred at 6 a. m., when the atmosphere was chilly and seemed to be felt more because of the hot weather earlier in the week.

Hearne's Verdicts Reversed.

Judge John B. McPherson of the United States circuit court of appeals, sitting at Philadelphia, has reversed the judgment of the circuit court for the Western District of Pennsylvania for $10,270 in favor of Col. Frank J. Hearne of this city in his suit against the German Insurance Company on a policy of insurance on his Pittsburgh residence. The company claimed that Hearne violated the conditions of his policy by increasing the hazard without notifying the company. Hearne sued about 12 insurance companies to recover $50,000 for the destruction of his house in Merewood avenue. The jury gave verdicts in his favor in each case. This decision will result in new trials.

LEFTY DAVIS' ANKLE BROKEN IN SIMILAR MANNER TO VAN HALTREN'S

THE PIRATES' VICTORY WAS A COSTLY ONE

Lefty Davis' Leg Broken in a Manner Similar to Van Haltren's.

ACCIDENT AT SECOND BASE

Tried to Pull Up from a Slide When Bone Snapped and Player Had to Be Carried from the Field—Tommy Leach's Great Work.

Yesterday's ball game between the Pittsburgh and New York teams, which was won by Pittsburgh by a score of 6 to 3, had an unfortunate accident which greatly marred the pleasure of the 2,489 spectators. The accident, which happened to "Lefty" Davis, the Pirate right fielder, in the fifth inning, was an almost exact duplication of the accident to George Van Haltren, the New York middle fielder, in a game here on May 21.

In the fifth inning Davis led off with a base hit and as Clarke struck out Lefty started to steal second. Bowerman, the New York catcher, fired the ball at the bag, but there was no one there to receive it, and Davis, who had just started to slide in, feet first, seeing the ball was going to the outfield, attempted to check his slide, and in doing so the accident occurred. Davis straightened himself to start for third but was unable, and he dropped over, face first, on the base. The other players ran to his assistance and a physician was called, who at first pronounced the injury only a sprain, but a later investigation showed a broken bone. Davis was carried from the field by two fellow players and later was sent to his boarding house in a carriage. Tannehill took the injured player's place in the field.

Two Accidents Were Alike.

The accident to Davis is almost an exact duplication of the one to Van Haltren, and it so happened that Phillippe and Sparks were the pitchers in both games. The accident to Davis is an unfortunate thing, both for the club and himself. Still, the Pirates are in better shape for such an emergency than any other team in the league, but it will be difficult to find as good a man for the reason that Davis is leading the league both in stolen bases and runs scored. As Conroy is under suspension it is likely that for today and Sunday Burke will be sent to short and Wagner to right field, and when Conroy's suspension ends on Monday he will go in at shortstop. Manager Clarke may decide not to break up his present infield and play Tannehill in right field for two more games.

This accident, while it created sorrow among the players, did not affect the game in the least, and it was a pretty contest, full of interest and exciting plays. The one player whose work stood out prominent above all others was little Tommy Leach, who put up a display of third base work never equaled here. During the afternoon Leach was called on to accept nine fielding chances and there was not what could be called an easy play in the entire number. The little fellow covered as much territory as two ordinary players would, and the way he scooped in difficult grounders and fielded the fiercest runners out at first brought forth exclamations of delight from the spectators.

Sparks a Victim.

Frank Sparks, who was doing the twirling for the visitors, pitched good ball, but, unfortunately, the support he received, particularly in the fourth inning when the Pirates scored the majority of their runs, made it look as though certain of the New York players did not care whether he won his game or not. It has been charged that the New York club has been controlled by a certain clique of players, and the display put up yesterday afternoon makes it look as though there was a great deal of truth in those charges, and Mugsy McGraw will do well to start chopping off heads as soon as he takes charge of affairs.

Deacon Phil was the champion slab artist and it was one of the deacon's good days. In only one inning, the seventh, were his puzzles solved, and then not enough to do any great harm, though it did make the score uncomfortably close. The Giants started out with a run in the first inning when Brodie soaked the ball to right for three bases and scored on Jones' fly out to Clarke. With one out in the seventh Smith singled and would have been an easy out at second on O'Hagan's grounder to Ritchey, but Claude made a bad toss and both runners were safe. Dunn's single to right scored Smith and advanced O'Hagan to third, from which point he scored on Wagner's fly out to Beaumont.

Got Their Runs in Bunches.

The Pirates did not do any scoring until the fourth inning, then they got four tallies. Beaumont started the merry-go-round by beating out a bunt, but was put out trying to steal, second. Wagner then singled and Bransfield sent him to third by a single to right. Fifty stole second. Ritchey got a base on balls. On Leach's grounder to Smith Wagner scored, but Ritchey was forced at second and then sent the crowd wild by driving the ball against the left field bleacher fence for three bases, scoring Bransfield and Leach. O'Connor got home a few minutes later on a wild pitch. In the eighth a single by Beaumont, a double by Wagner and a single by Ritchey netted two more runs. The score:

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Bowerman stopped one of Sparks' benders with his wrist in the fifth inning and retired from the game, Yeager taking his place.

Manager Clarke stirred up enthusiasm by his catch of Brodie's liner in the sixth inning. Fred had to make a forward dive, but he got the ball and held to it.

Sam Crane, the old ball player, who is here with the Giants, representing a New York newspaper, is a great admirer of Kitty Bransfield, and thinks him the best batter in the league.

Outfielder Jones and Second Baseman Smith made a pretty play in the eighth, when Leach's long fly was relayed to first and Ritchey put out. It required quick, accurate throwing to accomplish the play.

Christy Mathewson is carded to pitch for the Giants today, and the big fellow, who is once more in his old-time form, is anxious to take a game from the champions. Happy Jack Chesbro will be on the rubber for the Pirates.

Umpire Emslie called Leach out at first in the sixth inning, the play being a very close one, and Tommy entered a strong protest. When he took his position at third Tommy cried, "Come, wake up, and somebody wake the umpire up."

Eddie Poole's ten days' notice of release expired yesterday, and he went to his home at Malvern, O., where he intends spending two weeks hunting and fishing. Before leaving Poole said he had not yet decided to which club he will go.

Wagner's two-bagger in the eighth was a funny hit. Honus just laid his bat against the ball and it sailed neatly over the infielders' heads and rolled outside the foul line. Beaumont, who was on first, could easily have got home on the hit, but he stopped at third and got a severe call down from Manager Clarke.

Jack O'Connor put up an awful bluff in the eighth inning, when a foul tip accidentally glanced off his bat. Dowdy jumped about, holding his hand, and cried out to the umpire, "I guess you'll say that one didn't hit me." The umpire refused to allow his claim of being hit, and just to get even Jack soaked a single down into right field and the spectators gave him the glad hand.

Umpire Bob Emslie seemed to be a mark for foul tips yesterday. He got one on the left shoulder that made him do a wing dance around the home plate and later he got one on top of the head that was a soaker. An unfeeling grandstander was unkind enough to yell out, "Good. You're just getting paid back for your many sins."

No prettier display of third base ball was ever seen here than that put in by Tommy Leach yesterday, and every chance he had was a difficult one. It's the same old story, though, for Tommy does those tricks every day, and unless he does something bordering on the sensational not much attention is paid. Leach's work is so fast and clean cut that it stands out far ahead of all other guardians of the third bag.

The turning down of Bid McPhee as manager of the Cincinnati team will hardly occasion much surprise in baseball circles, since it is a fact that he has never been a success as a manager. The Reds were bad enough last season, but they are even worse this year. Now if John T. Brush will get rid of some of the players who are grandstanders and replace them with gritty youngsters, he may yet get a winning combination for Hamtown.

Mugsy McGraw was looked for to join the New York team here yesterday, but failed to put in an appearance. McGraw will probably arrive today, and his first work should be to thoroughly investigate his team and find out why it is that certain pitchers are given good support a while others are not. Yesterday's display in the fourth inning, when Bowerman failed to try and get a wild pitch, which allowed O'Connor to score from third, certainly looked bad.

After Walter Brodie had made his three-bagger in the first inning he chattered away like a magpie. Brodie is always talkative when he is making hits, but if he bingles [illegible] he is as close mouthed as Dummy Taylor. Sir Walter is still a grand fielder, and showed it when he captured Leach's bid for a three-bagger in the second inning. Brodie had a long chase after the ball, but he pulled it down. He also made a fine throw to the plate in the seventh and Wagner should have been nailed, but a sage muffed the ball.

There was a striking similarity in the accidents to Lefty Davis and George Van Haltren. Both men had their ankles broken while trying to stop a slide to second base and it happened that Phillippe and Sparks were the pitchers in both games. The accident to Davis may keep him out of the game all season. Still he is a game youngster, unlike Van Haltren, so that the bones may heal more quickly. The accident was a very unfortunate one, as Lefty was showing his best form of the season in hitting, base running and fielding, and his clever work will be missed by the champions.

"Haunts of Fish and Game."

This is the title of an artistic little book just issued by the Grand Trunk Publicity Department, in which the sportsman and angler, the tourist and those who are seeking for health and alert for pleasure, may find information that will guide them in the choice of a rendezvous for the gratification of their tastes or the exercise of their skill. It tells of the charms of the Diamond lake, the Ontario Highlands, the Thousand Islands and St. Lawrence river, the Rideau river and lakes and Lake St. John. An interesting account is given of the successful experiment made by the Grand Trunk and the Ontario government for the replenishing of waters of the northern lakes by transplanting parent bass. In all some 10,000 small mouth bass were transplanted from Lake Erie and distributed where needed. The cover of this brochure will at once strike the eye of the sportsman, for it shows the deer as it becomes the mark for the hunter's rifle.

A copy may be obtained free by applying to G. T. Bell, general passenger and ticket agent, Grand Trunk Railway System, Montreal, Canada.

M'PHEE NO LONGER MANAGES THE REDS

THE EX-KING OF SECOND BASEMEN LET OUT YESTERDAY.

Is Very Likely to Be Succeeded by Joe Kelley—Frank Bancroft Who Is in Charge Accepts Terms of Ex-Pirate Eddie Poole.

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

CINCINNATI, O., July 11.—John A. McPhee severed his connection with the Cincinnati club at noon today, and received his pay from Treasurer Lloyd. Manager McPhee was succeeded temporarily by Frank C. Bancroft, who has been in charge of the business end of the club for a number of years.

Bancroft was reluctant even to take temporary charge of the Reds, but Treasurer Lloyd insisted, and he finally agreed, pending the selection of a permanent successor to McPhee. Bancroft's first move was to accept the terms of Edward Poole, the pitcher and all-around player of the Pittsburgh's.

It is likely that a successor to McPhee was made in New York the other day, when President Brush and Freedman had a long talk with John J. McGraw. The new manager of the Reds will doubtless come from the American league, and a good guess is that the man will be Joe Kelly. This move will be a 10-strike for the local aggregation.

The release of Beck and Currie will immediately follow the securing of Edward Poole, who has been commanded to come immediately to join the team. Poole is to receive a large salary, and when not pitching will fill the role of general utility man.

That McPhee had no intention of resigning yesterday was apparent from his statements on the bench. He declared he would be there when the season ended, despite stories that he would be disposed of or would resign. The happening of today would indicate that the disposing of McPhee was not of his own choosing.

TERRY THE LIFE-SAVER.

McGovern Rescued an Actress from a Watery Grave.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 11.—(Special.)—Shortly before his departure from this resort today Terry McGovern distinguished himself as a life safer. Miss Maybelle Moore, leading lady of a theater company playing an engagement here, was bathing in the ocean with a party of her friends. She decided to swim out to a buoy about 100 yards from shore, but was caught by an under current and cried for help. McGovern, who was swimming nearby, went to her assistance and after considerable difficulty brought Miss Moore ashore. The heroine of the affair was profuse in her thanks to the little pugilist. She wanted to entertain Terry at a dinner this evening, but as he had made all arrangements for his departure the dinner was indefinitely postponed.

BROTHER AGAINST BROTHER.

Beals Wright Beat Irving Wright in Final Singles.

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, ONT., July 11.—The Canadian tennis championships were continued today on the Queens Royal court. In the final singles Beals Wright beat his brother, Irving Wright, three sets to one, and will challenge W. A. Larned tomorrow for the championship.

The final doubles will be played tomorrow, the Wright brothers playing E. P. Fischer and R. G. Hunt, and the championship round in ladies' singles and the final in the men's handicap will also be played. Scores:

Men's singles, final round—Beals Wright, Boston, beat Irving Wright, Princeton, 6-3, 6-3, 3-6, 6-1.

Men's doubles, semi-final round—E. P. Fisher, New York, and R. G. Hunt, California, beat A. C. McMaster and E. R. Patterson, Toronto, 6-4, 6-7, 6-2.

Beals Wright and Irving Wright, Boston, beat C. R. Lindley, Yale, and H. N. Cowan, Toronto, 6-0, 6-1.

Ladies' singles, final round—Miss Hague, Montreal, beat Mrs. Burgess, Toronto, 6-3, 6-3.

WRENN BROTHERS WON.

Defeated National Tennis Champions Ward and Davis.

NEW YORK, July 11.—The national doubles champions, Ward and Davis were beaten today by the Wrenn brothers in the tennis tournament on the courts of the Westchester Country club at Westchester. Davis was very wild and erratic, making a brilliant shot and following with poor work that lost his side the match. The Wrenns gave an extraordinary exhibition of team work. Little and Alexander were no match for the steadiness of Whitman and Ware. The summary:

Round Robin doubles—R. D. Wrenn and G. L. Wrenn, Jr., beat H. Ward and D. F. Davis, 6-4, 1-6, 12-10.

M. D. Whitman and L. E. Ware beat R. D. Little and L. Alexander, 8-6, 3-0, 6-4, 6-4.

Organization Has No Fight With Either Side in the Struggle, but Its Membership of 2,500 Are Opposed to All Lawlessness.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS TO THE GAZETTE.]

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 11.—For the first time since the mine workers decided to hold a special national convention, President Mitchell today consented to say something for publication about the gathering. He said it was utterly impossible to forecast the action of the convention. From his remarks it is almost certain the convention will do one of only two things, either decide on a general suspension or provide a defense fund for the anthracite strikers.

J. Ridgeway Wright of this city, leader of the Citizens alliance, which was recently organized in this vicinity, today sent an open letter to President Mitchell in which he calls the latter's attention to alleged intimidations, boycotting and other annoyances practiced on all persons who are working in the mines. He pays a tribute to organized labor generally for the good it has done and reminds Mr. Mitchell that every man has a right to work or remain idle, as he sees fit. In concluding his communication, Leader Wright says:

We, therefore, appeal to you to declare:

First—That the highways are free to all who desire to work, notwithstanding a strike is in progress.

Second—That boycotts against any business or professional man on the ground of services rendered to non-union workers are condemned by the union.

Third—That hanging in effigy, the digging of mock graves and every other form of violence, threat and libel, are condemned by the union.

Fourth—That strikers who participated in any of the offenses thus itemized will be held responsible to the union for all disturbances, unlawful boycotts, etc., in which either they themselves or their wives and children participate.

Referring to your speech at Nanticoke, we call your attention to the error in which it is based. The Citizens' alliance is not an adjunct to or organized by operators. Its membership of more than 2,500 is in sympathy with organized labor, but over and above it and above all organized capital, we intend to uphold orderly society. We are not the proper subjects of criticism, because we took no part in trying to suppress evils which are said to have occurred long before the alliance was formed, nor are we the subject of criticism because we have been active in trying to repress boycotts which you say occurred, but were limited to operators and miners in their struggle with one another.

But when the boycott raises its head against the private right of neutrals and when lawlessness destroys property, threatens arson and murder and takes the form of actual rioting, it is the right and the duty of neutrals and citizens generally to organize in self-defense and for the maintenance of public order, and we are justified in inviting a co-operation from both sides in the existing strike.

FIVE BRICKLAYERS SEVERELY INJURED

Were Working on Scaffold at Federal Machinery Company's New Building in Allegheny.

By the breaking of a scaffold at the Federal Machinery Company's new building, in Bouquet street, Allegheny, at 2.20 o'clock yesterday, five men were painfully injured, one of them seriously. The injured are:

JOHN EMICH, foreman, aged 42, of No. 1807 Irwin avenue, Allegheny; fracture of right shoulder blade and badly bruised about the body; taken to the Allegheny General hospital.

DANIEL JORDAN, aged 34, bricklayer, of No. 1301 Sandusky street, Allegheny; cut and bruised about head and body and probably injured internally; removed to Allegheny General hospital; condition is critical.

LEONARD REID, aged 26, bricklayer, of No. 114 Henderson street, Allegheny; right shoulder and side badly cut and bruised; wounds dressed at Allegheny General hospital, then taken home.

JOHN GREENE, aged 37, bricklayer, of Henderson street, Allegheny; right leg cut and bruised; taken home.

JOSEPH WRIGHT, aged 40, of No. 1213 Race street, Allegheny; left leg sprained and cut; taken home.

Six or seven workmen and 1,000 bricks were on the scaffolding when the supports gave way. The men fell about 12 feet. Only one man escaped injury.

MOVE ON TO AFFILIATE.

Pittsburgh Carpenters Show Disposition to Renew Relations With Building Trades Council.

There is a movement on in the ranks of the Brotherhood of Journeymen Carpenters and Joiners in the Pittsburgh district to renew affiliation with the Building Trades' council. A definite step may be taken at the meeting of the district council of the carpenters next Tuesday night.

Some months ago the carpenters withdrew from the council on the ground that it was an unnecessary expense, and during the spring strikes of the building trades none of the other trades would support the carpenters.

The several Pittsburgh district local organizations of the carpenters are now delivering a referendum vote on the officers for the carpenters' district council. A fight is being made to prevent A. M. Swartz from succeeding himself the 16th time as business agent.

Two district business agents will be named and it is said that W. J. Kelly will succeed himself, and that his associate will be either Michael Duff or Frank Storm. The district council will tabulate the vote on Tuesday night.

WAGE SCALES ADJUSTED.

Bi-Monthly Examinations Produce No Changes for Sheet or Tin Workers.

According to the bi-monthly adjustment of the sheet wage scale arranged yesterday at the headquarters of the American Sheet Steel Company in the Vandergrift building the present wages will continue this and next month, there having been no advances in sale prices in a long time.

In the tin plate branch the present scale has been reaffirmed by the bi-monthly adjustment.

John Pierce, assistant to the president of the Amalgamated association, returned yesterday from Youngstown, where the examination of the sales sheets called for an advance of 25 cents the ton for puddlers and 2 per cent for finishers. This makes the puddling rate $6 during July and August.

THE COMBINE'S ENEMY LOOKING FOR ASSISTANCE

Since Exposure of His Litigation Scheme, None Is Willing to Aid.

RISE OF STEEL NATURAL

Organization of the Ship Building Consolidation Making Good Progress, but It Will Be Some Time Before It Is Complete.

[BY PRIVATE WIRE TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, July 11.—Undaunted by threats of publicly exposing the methods of the clique operating against the United States Steel Corporation, David Lamar, the arch-conspirator of the opposition movement, evidently is determined to continue the attack against the combine. Mr. Lamar was busy today seeking assistance among certain of the stockholders of the corporation. He informed them that his intentions were of a "gilt-edged" order, and asked for their assistance in the suit brought by J. A. Hodge and others to restrain the corporation from carrying out its bond conversion plan.

The withdrawal of Russell Sage and Hopkins Bros. from the Hodge suit has greatly weakened the case, and Mr. Lamar's efforts are now directed toward finding substitutes. From what could be learned today Mr. Lamar and his associates have met with no success in the matter of securing additional support. One banker, who is one of the largest holders of the shares of the United States Steel Corporation, when approached today informed Mr. Lamar that he was heartily in favor of the bond conversion plan, having given it very careful consideration.

What steps have been taken in the matter of ventilating the methods of the promoters of the attack against the United States Steel Corporation, could not be learned today. It is said, however, that the statement that a concerted effort was being made to weed out the gang that has been harassing the combine as well as other corporations, was not idle talk. In this case immediate action can be expected, as the identity of the so-called conspirators is generally known.

Organizing Shipbuilding Combine.

The directors of the United States Shipbuilding Company have voted favorably upon the proposition to increase the capital stock to $45,000,000. As is well known, it was at first proposed to capitalize the company at $20,000,000, but the acquisition of the Bethlehem Steel Company, the majority of the stock of which was owned by Charles M. Schwab and J. P. Morgan & Co., required an increase.

Prominent members of the shipbuilding company today said the work of appraising the various plants preparatory to their conveyance to the combine is progressing satisfactorily, although it will be several weeks before this stage of the organization is passed. The further selection of officers and other operating arrangements have been deferred until appraisal shall have been completed. From this it is evident that it will be some time before any business will be done under the name of the United States Shipbuilding Company.

The New Steel Plant Near Buffalo.

It was officially stated today that the Lackawanna Steel Company's plants, now building near Buffalo, will be ready for operation about the first of next year. The company will be the largest competitor of the United States Steel Corporation in heavy steel. The Vanderbilts are largely interested in the Lackawanna company, and it is likely that most of the equipment work of the New York Central railroad and its associated companies will be placed with the Lackawanna.

Strike Situation Serious.

There are indications that the coal operators of the country regard the strike situation as being much more serious than they have yet admitted. The failure of the miners and operators at Birmingham to agree upon a scale for the miners of Alabama admittedly is a serious complication, as it will make it easier for President Mitchell to call out the miners of that section, should such a course be decided upon in the national convention at Indianapolis.

An important conference of bituminous operators took place yesterday afternoon at the office of the Beech Creek Coal Company. It was called with a view to ascertaining, if possible, how much coal was held by the large shippers to the New York harbors, and whether the stock was more than sufficient to meet present requirements. An effort also was made to determine what the effect would be in the event of a general suspension being ordered. The conference was attended by representatives of practically all the operating companies doing a large business in New York.

Informal reports from each company revealed the fact that each was meeting contract demands with considerable difficulty, and had had no opportunity to accumulate a reserve stock. The consensus of opinion was that the present New York stock was very light, even for this time of year, and that the market demand would increase as the date of the convention approaches and the possibility of extreme action come more into view.

Market Rise Natural.

The statement was made today that the recent activity of the Steel shares has not been due to syndicate operations. A representative of the United States Steel Corporation today said it was natural that the market for the Steel shares should be strong, now that the flimsy character of the attack against the combine had been disclosed. The shares, he said, would be allowed to seek their own level.

The announcement that the court of errors will convene on July 21 to consider the steel cases was favorably received in the financial district today. It was feared that the combine would have to wait until the fall for a decision.

E. W. HARDEN.

NEWS FROM THE MINES

[BY PRIVATE WIRE TO THE GAZETTE.]

NEW YORK, July 11.—Two important strikes were reported in the Leadville district today. The entire breast of the Helen Gould tunnel is in ore assaying 25 per cent copper, 78 ounces silver and $16 gold. After operation extending over ten years, the vein has been opened in the tunnel of the Horseshoe Prince. It shows first-class values.

Sloping has begun on the east 200-foot level of the Charter Oak at Central City, Col., where there is a streak of fine looking smelting ore showing yellow and gray copper, as well as iron black jack and lead. An early shipment will be made to the sampling works.

The June output from the Golden Cycle at Cripple Creek was 32,200 tons of an average grade of $35. Twenty-five hundred tons come from the main working shaft and 700 tons from leases worked by leasers.

The Henson Creek Lead Mines Company, which is operating in Hinsdale county, Col., has ordered a 150-ton concentrating plant, to be delivered within 60 days.

Owing to the heavy drain on its resources for ore production for a new mill, the Portland, at Cripple Creek, has again passed the regular quarterly dividend.

The Canyon City (Col.) zinc lead smelter is handling 2,000 tons of ore a month and additional facilities are being provided which will increase the capacity of the plant to 6,000 tons a month. The plant receives lead and zinc ores from Utah, Montana, New Mexico and Arizona, as well as from Leadville and other districts of Colorado. Added to these are a certain tonnage of copper sulphides from the Independence and some siliceous ores from Cripple Creek.

The Calaveras, says a dispatch from Alamogordo, N. M., has shipped a carload of ore to El Paso for a test run. This property, on which considerable development has been done, is largely owned in Philadelphia.

The White Rig, at Placho, Ariz., is taking out ore netting $150 to the ton, and the Exposition is shipping ore to El Paso that nets $280 a ton.

A mill run of 12 tons of ore at the Wild Horse, near Pierce City, Ida., realized $2,200 gold. The rock was taken out in the course of development.

The pockets of high-grade silver-copper ores in the Galena at Fish Springs, Utah, have settled into a well-defined streak which, it is believed, is leading to a chamber similar to the one from which $200,000 was mined. The streak is now an inch wide and yields $1,600 to the ton.

The Poorman group in the Poorman district, 40 miles northwest of Helena, Mont., has been bonded for a large sum to a syndicate represented by a mining man named Howell of San Francisco.

The Metal Market.

The metal markets today were narrow and unfavorable. Lines of some and spread. Variations from yesterday's prices were few and unimportant. In copper a fairly steady tone was noted, with business, however, quiet. Standard, spot to August, made a slight gain, closed at $11 50@11 55; lake closed at $12 50@12 75; electrolytic at $11 90@12 05, and casting at $11 75@11 85. The London market was quiet, with spot at £132 2s 6d and futures at £85 7s 6d. Locally tin ruled quiet at $28 50@28 75, and in the English market at £127 10s for spot and £125 10s for futures. Lead was quiet and steady at $4 75. London was quoted at £11 8s 2d. Spelter remained quoted at 5¼c and firm; London was unchanged at £19 2s 6d. Trade in iron has tapered off considerably of late and the tone is possibly a little easier, though prices show no change in the local market. Quotations are nominal: No. 1 foundry, northern, $22 00@23 00; No. 2 foundry, northern, $21 00@22 00; No. 1 foundry, southern, $21 50@22 50; No. 1 foundry, southern soft, $21 50@22 50. European markets reported slight declines. Glasgow closed 58s 1d and Middlesboro at 50s 1½d.

OPENING BULGE COULD ONLY LAST FOR SHORT TIME

Striking Advances Are Made in Rock Island and Union Pacific Stocks.

OTHERS FALL HEAVILY

Declines Most Substantial in Those Securities Helped by the Recent Rise—Exports of Domestics for June Take Big Tumble.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, July 11.—Opening prices this morning were at the highest average level of the day. There were striking advances afterward, notably in Rock Island and Missouri Pacific, but these proved unavailing to sustain the general market, which sagged slowly but steadily throughout the rest of the session. The majority of stocks closed lower than last night, and the declines were substantial in such stocks as New York Central, Chesapeake & Ohio, Chicago & Northwestern and others which have recently been prominent in the rise. Its spurt at the opening was due especially to the encouragement felt on account of the government's monthly crop report, especially in respect to corn, which had a stimulating effect on the demand for grain-carrying roads.

Buying of Bull Leaders.

But it became plain at once that the buying was conspicuous only in Missouri Pacific and Rock Island, which stocks are peculiarly associated with the bull leaders of the market. Atchison and the other Pacifics did not move more than a fraction at any time. The perspective of tomorrow's bank statement was the counteracting influence to the crop report. The heavy movement of currency to the interior has been a subject of comment all week. The usual preliminary estimates of the regular express movement of currency to the interior indicate a balance against New York of only a little over $1,000,000.

Promise Big Decline.

But the sub-treasury operations promise to bring the decline in the cash reserves up to nearly $5,000,000. The report of June exports of domestic products explains the continued scarcity of foreign exchange bills, which, together with the continued selling here of stocks for London account, necessitates the large borrowing from foreign lenders. Total exports of domestic products for June have fallen off over $8,000,000 from the previous month and $15,759,239 from June of last year. In fact, it is necessary to go back to July of 1898 to find a month in which the exports of domestic products has been as low as the past month's, $40,627,282. All the items except mineral oils show decreases, but the cutting in half of the breadstuffs exports shows clearly where the principal shortage is. The market closed dull and easy.

Bonds were quite dull and irregular. Total sales, par value, $1,973,000. United States bonds were unchanged on the last call.

WALL STREET FEATURES.

Total sales for the day, 503,000 shares.

The highest average level of the day was at the opening.

New York Central and Chesapeake & Ohio were among those stocks most seriously affected by the slump.

The opening rise was due to the government crop report issued Thursday.

The sub-treasury operations promise to bring the decline in the cash reserves to nearly $5,000,000.

Sales of United States Steel were: Common, 23,000; preferred, 5,000.

Producing Oil Wells Drilled Deeper

Developments in the Lower Southwest yesterday consisted very largely of completing wells that had been drilled in for some little time and which were producing, but had not been finished.

In Advance, and one-half mile southwest of the "Little Germany" district, in Marshall county, W. Va., the South Penn Oil Company has completed and shot its test on the Gertrude Stein farm and has a producer good for 100 barrels a day. The size and location of this well show quite a liberal extension to the Gordon sand producing territory to the southwest, and will hold out inducements to search still farther in the same direction.

In the Folsom end of the new Gordon development, in Wetzel county, the same company has completed, but not shot, No. 1 on the David Talkington farm and No. 6 on the Genine Robinson farm. The first is good for 115 barrels a day and the latter 80 barrels a day.

On the east side of the same development and just over the line in Harrison county, Greenlee & Co. have drilled in a test on the Williard Jr. farm and have a show for a producer. As soon as the pay was reached drilling was suspended to make tankage connections and it will be drilled in tomorrow. In the same locality Greenlee & Co. are drilling in the Gordon stray on the Ice farm. Both are located in advance of developments and will have some bearing on future operations in that direction.

North of Salem, Harrison county, the Hartson county, the United States Oil Company has completed its test on the G. W. Williams farm and has a 90-barrel producer. This well is 4 miles in advance of the opposite.

On the west side of Salem the South Penn Oil Company has drilled its No. 3 on the John Randolph farm into the stray and has developed a strong sand producer.

In Clay district, Ritchie county, the Three Joes Oil Company's gusher on the Elroy Wagner farm is declining. The last 24 hours' gauge was only 650 barrels.

In the Meadville district, Tyler county, G. R. McGrannahan has completed his No. 5 on the Albert Mason farm and has a 20-barrel producer in the Big Injun.

On McKim creek the Carter Oil Company has drilled its test on the Thomas Hill farm through the Gordon and has a fair producer.

On Shawnee creek, Meade district, Pleasants county, the May Oil Company has drilled its No. 3 on the John Wagner farm through the Coon sand and has a duster.

On the same stream G. M. Worthington has drilled his No. 12 on the J. C. Michael farm through the Cow Run sand and has a 35-barrel producer. The well is now in process of shot. The Amity Oil Company had a greater surprise when it completed its No. 3 on the John R. Shingleton farm and got an 80-barrel producer. The well is rated for 15 barrels a day when drilled into the sand.

On the Ohio side in the Jackson Ridge development, Monroe county, Smith & Co. have drilled their No. 2 on the Mary A. Jackson farm through the Keener and have a 5-barrel pumper.

In the Lewisville district the Shawmut Oil Company has drilled its No. 3 on the Louis Matz farm through the Big Lime and will not have better than a 5-barrel pumper.

In the Chester Hill district, Morgan county, the Ohio Consolidated Oil Company has completed Nos. 6 and 7 on the E. R. Heilman farm and has a brace of little pumpers.

F. M. Selby & Co.'s No. 21 E. B. Lambert farm is good for 1,000 barrels a day and the Southwestern Petroleum Company's No. 2 L. O. and B. J. Smith is a 5-barrel pumper.

In the Chester Hill district, Morgan county, the Ohio Consolidated Oil Company has completed Nos. 6 and 7 on the E. R. Heilman farm and has a brace of little pumpers.

F. M. Selby & Co.'s No. 21 E. B. Lambert farm is good for 1,000 barrels a day and the Southwestern Petroleum Company's No. 2 L. O. and B. J. Smith is a 5-barrel pumper.

In the Chester Hill district, Morgan county, C. G. Dutton & Co. have completed No. 3 on the St. John Bros.' farm and have a 10-barrel pumper in the Berea grit.

In the Marietta district the Nugget Oil Company has completed its No. 6 on the Mary Henderson farm and has a 10-barrel pumper.

How the Local Talent Fared.

In the Taylorstown district, Washington county, Pa., the Forest Oil Company has drilled its test on the William Herm farm through the fourth sand and has a show for a 35 or 40-barrel producer.

South of Bakerstown, in Allegheny county, the Devonian Oil Company has completed its No. 4 on the Samuel Sarraux farm and has a show for a good pumper.

Near Bull Creek pumping station, Butler county, Fleming Bros. have completed a test on the James Thompson farm and have a small gasser.

In the Ambersen district, Butler county, the Forest Oil Company has drilled its No. 8 on the Virgilio Falcon farm in the fifth sand and got a light gasser. The same company is drilling No. 24 to the third sand for gas.

In the Troutman district S. G. Coffin has drilled No. 5 to the fourth through the fourth sand and has a small pumper.

In the Speechley sand district the Troutman Oil and Gas Company has completed its No. 2 on the Lucy Dunlap farm and has a 5-barrel pumper.

Decreasing in Production.

WINDOW GLASS LED THE SALES AT AN ADVANCE.

Common Stock Sold Nearly 1,100 Shares, but the Close Was Dull.

THE STEEL ISSUES FIRMER

Crucible Common Gained ¼ and the Preferred Was Unchanged—U. S. Steels Both Higher—Pittsburgh Coal Preferred Declined.

The market on the Pittsburgh stock exchange yesterday, while a shade more active than on the preceding day, was still very dull and uninteresting. As a rule, the sales were small and prices irregular, though there were occasional exceptions. The feature was in American Window Glass common, which sold nearly 1,100 shares and closed firmer and ½ higher at 63¼, though the finish was dull. The opening was at 62¾, and the strength was doubtless due to the belief that some good may result from the Cleveland harmony meeting, though such is not at all a certainty. In fact the failure of the Independent Company to participate leaves the situation at somewhat of a standstill, and the halt will likely be observed in the action of the stock. The preferred sold four shares at 94½, the highest price in months and then fell back to 93¾ for 35 shares, the same as Wednesday's close. In the other glass stocks there was nothing doing. United States Glass common and preferred were unchanged at Thursday's quotations, while Plate Glass common offered at $1.50, $2 above the last selling price. The steel issues were firmer, but still only dull. Crucible common was ½ higher at 21¾, while the preferred was unchanged at 85½. United States Steel common advanced ⅜ to 39¾ and the preferred ⅛ to 90¾, the sales of both being small. Pittsburgh Coal preferred sold less than 200 shares and closed ½ lower at 91½. The common did not sell, but quoted without material change at 25⅝@23¾. River Coal issues were dull and ⅛ lower, the common at 12½ and the preferred at 40. Philadelphia Coal common reacted ½ to 48¾, the same price at which the preferred was quoted. Western Electric seconds were very dull and unchanged at 104½. Westinghouse Airbrake did not sell, but was lower at 182½ asked, 181 only being bid. Standard Underground Cable advanced to 215 bid and National Fire Proofing common was practically unchanged at 31¼ bid and 31¾ asked. The preferred was heavy at 40 asked, the best bid being 39½. Brewing stocks were dull and without appreciable change. The Coalers continued active and firm at 110¾. There were no other noteworthy features.

PITTSBURGH FEATURES.

Bank exchanges decreased $499,836 78.

Sales Pittsburgh stock exchange, 2,672 shares and $36,000 bonds.

1,060 Window Glass common sold. Closed at 63¼, a gain of ½.

Consolidated Gas preferred sold at 45½.

Crucible Steel common closed at 21¾ and the preferred at 85½. Both were dull.

United States Steels were quiet. The common closed at 39⅜ and the preferred at 90⅜.

The coalers declined fractionally. Philadelphia Company common reacted to 48¾.

$26,000 Brewing 6s sold at 110¾. Brewing stocks were dull but steady.

Westinghouse Electric seconds closed at 104½.

The following is a complete summary of yesterday's official transactions on the Pittsburgh stock exchange. It shows the change in the closing selling prices, compared with the last preceding sales, the total sales of each security, the opening, high, low and closing prices and final bids and offers.

*New high record. †Price for four shares only.

Michael Zahniser, for over 30 years cashier of the Sharon National bank at Sharon, Pa., has tendered his resignation and will be succeeded by Walter Woodford, assistant cashier. Mr. Zahniser held the position ever since the bank was organized.

For a year or more Harry M. Long has been fighting in the courts concerning 19 feet of grounds which he owned adjoining his residence in Sewickley. Yesterday he was made happy as a boy because the supreme court had decided in his favor.

FINANCIAL DRIFT.

Hill & Co. bought Pittsburgh Coal preferred. There were just five separate trades after 2 p. m.

For 500 United States Glass common 34¾ was bid.

Robinson Bros. bought Philadelphia Company common.

Standard Oil interests were reported to be buying St. Paul.

Robinson Bros. were the sole sellers of Westinghouse Electric 2ds.

It is now claimed that the Boston operators are acting on the long side of sugar.

The first recorded sale was 10 Pittsburgh Coal preferred at 92 and the last 100 at 91½.

There are renewed reports about the acquisition of the Des Moines road by the Rock Island.

The New York banks have lost nearly $5,000,000 this week, so a poor statement is to be expected.

Twenty-two securities were dealt in during the day and all but six traded without a fluctuation in price.

Sugar was firm and it is claimed there is still a considerable short interest in Washington and elsewhere.

Louisville & Nashville rallied easily on rumors of some prospective advantages from the financing of the Morgan purchases.

Ernie contracted to sell Iroquois Company 4s yesterday, disposing of $5,000; Walker joined him in the movement and disposed of $18,000.

H. M. Long and H. Miller were the principal sellers of American Window Glass common. M. K. McMullin was the only seller of the preferred.

The Paris tribunal of commerce yesterday declared the Caisse Generale Des Familles to be insolvent. The liabilities are said to be 40,000,000 francs.

R. G. Hall has been a persistent seller of United States Steel preferred, and yesterday again stuck to that side of the market, being joined by Hill & Co.

The government crop report was the principal factor at the opening, and the fine showing in corn caused a sharp advance in Missouri Pacific in Wall street.

It is said that a good deal of the buying of Rock Island is by Russell Sage, who sold a lot of calls on it and when they expired he bought the stock and is now hurrying it.

The annual meeting of the Virginia Chemical Company will be held next week. There are intimations of closer relations with its competitors. Earnings are said to be double those of a year ago.

The Southern Pacific was rather disappointing to the room, although well informed people said the decrease in the earnings was due to the expenditures in connection with the improvement of the Ogden branch.

An unusual occurrence in the quotations was in Pittsburgh Coalers' stock, both the common and preferred quoting at 48¾ bid and 49 asked. This is the first time in more than a year that they have quoted at the same price. Generally the common is the highest.

There has been a quiet and steady absorption of stocks for some time, and the result has been a creeping bull market. The floating supply of stocks is very small and when the public comes in, as it surely will, prices will advance rapidly. I think everything points to much higher prices within the next month.—Evans.

The New York Commercial of July 10 says: The recently organized Federal Sugar Refining Company, which has erected a refinery at Yonkers to make sugar by a patented process, discovered its method of working Spreckles, Jr., the head of the Federal Company, began making sugar this week. The refinery has a capacity of 1,000 barrels a day. Some of the new sugar was on exhibition yesterday at the company's down town offices and salesrooms, and declared by experts to be "a very pretty sugar." The company began taking orders yesterday for their sugar in 25-barrel lots at 4c for 100 pounds, which is 1 cent per pound below the price of the Amalgamated Sugar Refining Company for the same grade of sugar. At the lower prices of the new company it is claimed the company will do an enormous business.

Declared Dividends.

Boston Wool Market.

BOSTON, July 11.—The Commercial Bulletin will say in tomorrow's report on the wool trade of the United States: The wool market continues active and firm. Prices have further advanced on several grades of domestic and the tendency is upward. The demand from manufacturers is still general, large and small buyers operating. London was rather a disappointment, but has had no influence here, as the offerings have not been suitable for America.

The receipts of wool in Boston since January 1, 1902, have been 149,084,666 pounds against 107,792,693 pounds for the same period in 1901. The Boston shipments to date are 127,750,629 pounds, against shipments of 98,708,045 pounds for the same period in 1901. The stock on hand in Boston January 1, 1902, was 77,340,463 pounds, the total stock today is 88,855,800 pounds. The stock on hand July 13, 1901, was 54,614,150 pounds.

Groceries.

Quotations for all staple groceries remained unchanged yesterday, with flour in very firm condition, the range of selling being from $4 15 to $4 25 for fancy spring patents, these figures showing steady adherence from jobbers. The wheat market during the week has fluctuated several times, but has been generally strong. Sugar and coffee are selling at prices ruling last week, with the market governed by conditions which do not vary greatly from day to day. Navy beans, steady to strong.

Flour—Jobbers' prices: Fancy spring patents, $4 15@4 25; fancy winter patents, $3 80@4 00; straight winter, $3 80@3 90; bakers, spring, $3 00@3 60; rye, $3 45@3 60; graham, $4 00@4 50; cornmeal, bbl, $3 50@3 60; 10-lb cotton bags, 40c.

Canned Goods.

Various conditions have combined to bring about an easier tone of affairs in canned tomatoes, for which quotations are slightly lower. New packs are offerings at lower figures than earlier in the season, and spots are feeling the influence of the weaker situation. Added to this is the fact that fresh tomatoes are now plentiful and selling at low prices, while the season for large demand of canned stock is almost at hand. Other lines of canned goods there is no change.

Standard pie peaches, 80@85c; gallon pie peaches, $2 50@3 00; California L. C. peaches, $1 00@2 35; Maryland peaches, $1 25@1 75; California Y. Fruits and Produce.

There was a good Friday trade yesterday, and the markets held fairly steady. Few quotable changes occurring. Potato receipts are plentiful and prices, though nominally unchanged, are easy, with buyers apparently looking for early declines, as figures are lower in points of shipment. Liberal supplies of tomatoes are coming in, bushel boxes from New Jersey being this week's leading offering. Peaches have developed more strength and are higher in price. Deer plant is steady. Corn is in liberal supply, with choice selling well.

Apples—Fancy, boxes, $2 00@2 50; new Virginia, per bu basket, 50c@$1 00; fancy red, ½ bu basket, 50@60c.

FOOD AGENT MUST PAY COSTS IN OLEO CASES

Lower Court Affirmed in Upholding Grand Jury's Action on 400 Bills.

SUPERIOR COURT OPINIONS

R. K. Sayers Gets a New Trial Because of Conviction Upon Sole Evidence of an Accomplice—Barton Must Serve Time.

Prothonotary George Pearson yesterday received a number of opinions handed down by the superior court in Philadelphia. Few are important.

In the commonwealth against S. B. Charters, an appeal of James Terry, pure food agent, from the judgment of Judge S. A. McClung, in refusing to send back to the grand jury about 400 bills in which persons were charged with violating the oleomargarine law, the judgment of the lower court is affirmed. The grand jury ignored the bills and placed the costs upon Terry.

Judge Rice, in part, says: "It may be the action of the grand jury was grossly erroneous, but that was absolutely illegal cannot be affirmed without going outside the record. The same is true of the contention that the refusal to set aside the finding was an abuse of descretion. We, therefore, shall not enter into a discussion of the question which would be raised if the facts alleged in the affidavits filed by the appellant were upon the record. Finding no error in the record proper, all of the assignments of error are overruled and the judgment is affirmed."

In the appeal of R. K. Sayers, indicted with Fred T. Newland for forgery, a new trial is granted. It was complained that the charge of the court was an error regarding character, and that a well established principle of law forbids a conviction upon the evidence alone of an accomplice.

The judgment of common pleas court No. 3 is reversed in the cases of John Shaughessy and wife against the city of Pittsburgh. The plainaiffs were awarded about $1,500 for the drowning of their children by the overflowing of Little Saw Mill run, several years ago.

The court refused to allow a reargument of the case of Attorney L. C. Barton and orders that the records in the case be sent to the lower court and that the judgment be carried out. Barton was convicted and sentenced to six months in the workhouse on a charge of embezzlement. He gave bail and appealed to the superior court, which affirmed the judgment of the lower court at its last session in Pittsburgh.

REFUSED TO PAY BILL

Infectious Disease Patient Sued by Knoxville for Expenses Incurred by His Illness.

The borough of Knoxville is endeavoring to make one who was a sufferer from an infectious disease pay for the expense incurred by his illness. Attorney W. D. Grimes, representing the borough had a foreign attachment issued against William H. White in common pleas court No. 2. The petition is signed by John P. Moore, borough treasurer.

It is stated that White came from Ohio on June 1, locating in Summit street, that borough. At the time he was afflicted with an infectious disease. He became delirious and it was necessary for the board of health to take charge of the case. A physician and nurse employed by the borough cost $200. Medicines, fruits, etc, were furnished to White, making a total of $325 expended by the borough, which amount, it is now alleged, White owes. He has returned to Ohio, having absconded from the jurisdiction of the court. It is also alleged that White is about to assign his real estate to defraud his creditors.

DENY HARLEY'S CLAIMS.

Defendants Say They Owe Him Nothing as Partner in Drug Store.

An answer was filed in the equity suit of Fred O. Harley against Samuel H. McCain, Albert M. McCain and W. W. McCleary for an accounting of the business of the Lincoln Avenue Pharmacy, Limited, of Bellevue. The plaintiff was former manager of the store and he claims that he was ousted.

The defendants deny they entered into partnership with the plaintiff. It is also said he was unable to pay his subscription. It is charged Harley is totally insolvent, that he transferred all of his real estate to his wife to defraud his creditors and that he cannot become personally liable, as the defendants have paid all of the debts of the association. It is alleged Harley neglected to furnish quarterly reports; that it was discovered he was appropriating the proceeds of the company, and that when he refused to buy out the place he was deposed.

LEGAL BRIEFS.

The will of Nancy Ferree of Corapolis was filed.

The account of the executors of the estate of Hester J. Muirhead shows a balance of $30,023.04.

A petition in bankruptcy was filed against Jud and Judice D. Coe of Clearfield, doing business as Coe Bros.

Letters testamentary were taken out on the $15,000 estate of Mary J. Cooper by the Safe Deposit & Trust Company.

Melissa J. Bickerton sued the Pittsburgh & Southwestern Railroad Company for damages to property in Jefferson township.

In the United States district court a petition in bankruptcy was filed by John Brocklosak, a physician and surgeon of DuBois, giving liabilities of $1,082 and assets $287.

A bill in equity was filed by the Pennsylvania Saving Fund and Loan association against Theresa Ebert and others for the partition of property in the Fourth ward, Allegheny.

Lettie Cochrane asks for the appointment of a lunacy commissioner to inquire into the habits and proclivities of William C. Cochrane, in place of A. M. O'Brien, who has left the city.

Letters of administration were taken out by Attorney Albert B. Weyer on the estate of Michael Gerver, valued at about $11,000. Similar letters were granted to Attorney William Garver of the stock on the estate of Caroline L. Garver, worth $400.

George Ruppert sued the Pittsburgh Construction Company for $1,000 for alleged trespass upon his land. He also wants $10,000 damages from the West Side Belt Railroad Company for the obstruction of a road in West Liberty borough.

Executions were issued as follows: M. A. Ross use, vs. Jacob Franz, $6,650; J. H. White vs. Joseph S. Young et al., $4,674, same vs. same, $4,041.75; Meyers Vs. George A. Madden, $1,134; J. W. Houston & Co. vs. Robert L. Moffitt, $165; James W. Mills vs. J. G. McKelvy, $942.

Hugh Davis and wife entered suit against the Pittsburgh Construction Company for $22,500. It is claimed the company's blasting in Lower St. Clair township has affected Mrs. Davis with nervous prostration. It is also alleged the employes of the company have trespassed upon the plaintiff's grounds, tearing down trees and fences.

THE LEADING PIANO STORE.

Presents an Array of Instruments That Has Never Been Equalled.

No one need wonder why it is that so many persons think of Hamilton's the moment pianos are mentioned. The fact is, this old reliable music house has been known for over 30 years throughout the musical trade for its upright methods and for the high-grade instruments whose sale it controls in this territory. Hamilton's music house has earned its enviable record by the manner in which its business has been conducted. The interests of customers are always protected here. Every piano in the stock is fully guaranteed. It makes no difference how little money you may pay for an instrument, if you buy it at Hamilton's you have the satisfaction of knowing that it is just what it is represented to be. You are sure of big value for your money every time.

Any person can tell the character of this establishment by entering and looking around at the various displays. First place is naturally accorded to the A. B. Chase piano, because this instrument is everywhere recognized as the most artistic piano on the market today. It is not bolstered by a reputation made by a firm that existed a century ago, but is dependent upon its own intrinsic merit for the success which it has attained. Examine the A. B. Chase critically. You'll find it different from all other pianos in point of pure tone quality. This is why the A. B. Chase is so often spoken of as an art piano for artists—the refinement of tonal beauty. No one who admires artistic music will ever prefer any other instrument to the A. B. Chase.

You may think you have heard a perfect piano, but unless you have heard an A. B. Chase you have yet to realize the meaning of the term.

Why not come in as soon as convenient and satisfy yourself as to the relative merits of the pianos which are supposed to occupy places of importance in the list of high-grade instruments? The A. B. Chase is not only the most artistic piano, but no other is to be compared with it. That's putting the case pretty strongly, but competent judges have so expressed themselves time and again. Therefore the wisdom of buying an A. B. Chase is easily demonstrated to those whose predilections impel them toward the best of everything in the line of music.

As a matter of course, no one piano is sufficient to satisfy the demands of a multitude of buyers such as Hamilton's supply, so the A. B. Chase is surrounded by the most remarkable group of pianos ever assembled in one establishment. Conspicuously prominent is the J. & C. Fischer, which is unquestionably the most wonderful piano in existence in respect to its brilliant vibrant quality. The brilliancy of the Fischer accounts for the fact that at the present time over 118,000 Fischers are in use. Surely this is evidence of merit of a positive character. And the fame of the Fischer is continually spreading. Although manufactured for over 60 years, it is better now than at any time in the past.

The very fact of Hamilton's reputation for selling only reliable instruments accounts for the frequently expressed opinion that anyone could select a piano from this stock while blindfolded and be sure of satisfaction. Prices range from $200 upward, and those who prefer easy monthly payments can arrange terms to suit.

No one looking for a really fine piano at a moderate price can do better than examine the exquisite Schumann. This piano's sweet tone is the admiration of all discriminating persons, and if you investigate you'll find that the Schumann is really superior to various pianos costing from $100 to $200 more. The Smith & Barnes and the Hamilton pianos also call for special mention, for they are always in the front rank of reliable makes at moderate prices.

Don't think you are not going to be interested in a piano simply because you or some other member of your family can not play. Have an Angelus Piano Player placed in your home, and it need not make a particle of difference whether any of you can play or not. Any person can operate the Angelus (no experience is required), and with the aid of this great invention your piano will be made ten times more valuable to you. It plays any make of piano, and all kinds of music. If you have a piano that has been silent, now's the time to revive the slumbering harmonies.

The Angelus will play for you any time you favor us with a call. We cordially invite you to come and hear it.

AN OUTLINE OF LATEST PROGRAM FOR FILTRATION

Mechanical Filtration Is to Be Provided for South Side People.

A PLACE FOR SHEPHERD

Machine Will Have No Chance to Complain That It Has No Representation—South Siders Have Taken a Decided Stand.

Another machine bubble has been exploded. The city government will be given representation on the committee of experts that will examine filtration plants. Supt. A. B. Shepherd of the bureau of water supply and distribution, recognized the country over as an expert engineer and competent authority on water systems, will work with the experts.

Director J. Guy McCandless will be instructed to go on with his detailed plans and final estimate. All this will be provided for at the special meeting of council next Monday evening. If present plans are carried out, the South Side will have water that is mechanically filtered.

The resolution providing for these things will be introduced in common council next Monday evening by W. H. Stevenson of the Fourteenth ward, chairman of the finance committee. It will be adopted and then referred to the filtration committee for action. The resolution will instruct Director McCandless to proceed with the work on the detailed plans and on the final estimate.

Experts to Be Employed.

When these plans are completed they will be turned over to the committee on filtration. This committee will employ an expert or experts, who will take the plans and go over them and make an estimate of what it will cost to carry them into effect. Superintendent A. B. Shepherd will be directed to meet with these experts. The city government cannot then complain that it had no representative.

After these experts have made their estimate of what such a plant will cost, then the question of the issuance of bonds to the extent of $1,500,000 will go to the people. Realizing that the South Side would vote against the matter unless the people of that section are also assured of filtered water at once, arrangements will be made to install a mechanical filter plant on the South Side, through which will pass the water the Monongahela Water Company furnishes to its South Side patrons.

The franchise which the Monongahela company holds does not expire until 1906, and the South Side cannot get any city water for four years. The installation of a mechanical filter would probably do away with much of the antagonistic sentiment on the South Side.

South Siders' Determined Stand.

Councilman Jacob Soffel of the Thirty-second ward has notified councils that his people will not vote for any pure water idea that does not include the South Side. Other South Side councilmen are in the same position. The people of the South Side are in earnest in preparing to vote against the proposition unless some provision is made for them.

Councilman Stevenson, who will introduce the resolution, said yesterday: "I think it no more than proper that the city government be given a representative on the board of experts, and for that reason the resolution will contain a provision directing Mr. Shepherd to sit with them. The head of the city water bureau is certainly the proper man to discuss matters pertaining to the city water supply.

"I scarcely think it would be proper to invite either Engineer Morris Knowles or Engineer Allen Hazen to participate in this, for they have made the figures which are before us now, and they would scarcely admit that those figures were wrong, or would join in a report on them. They are both sand filtration experts. According to them, sand filtration is the only system. We want men who are unbiased."

DOROTHY SOUTH

22ND THOUSAND

"Book News" for May says:

"In 'Dorothy South' Mr. Eggleston has created a simple and beautiful romance, full of nobility and of all the finer emotions, wholesome, joyous, graceful, intercepted by touches here and there of sparkling wit. Janice Meredith and my Lady Peggy were mischievous, blithesome, and winning, but they were also coquettish, capricious; Dorothy Mannering was gentle, stately, and sweet; Audrey was child-like and beautiful, but over her hung a cloud of melancholy languor. Dorothy South, albeit she has a mystery, is rarely sad, her very presence creates an atmosphere of sunshiny brightness, her girlish dignity is appealing, she attracts unconsciously and captivates."
